Police Probe Fulton Crash

A police investigation is under way into a traffic incident involving B.C. Supreme Court Judge E. Davie Fulton, Attorney-General Garde Gardom said today.

The 63-year-old former federal justice minister and one-time leader of the B.C. Conservative party was given a 24-hour driving suspension by Vancouver police following a minor rear-end collision Saturday night.

Under the law, police can suspend a licence if there is evidence the driver has been drinking.

Gardom said Mr. Justice Fulton had holidays planned and is now taking two or three weeks off.

The attorney-general said the investigation is expected to take about a week.

Gardom said he had no details on the case other than what he has heard on news reports.

Vancouver radio station CKNW said the criminal law division of Gardom's ministry has asked for a tape transcript made as city police officers gave Fulton his suspension.

But Gardom said he could not confirm that.

The tape was made by CKNW reporter George Garrett when police stopped a car at 70th and Granville after a minor motor vehicle accident.

It quotes Fulton questioning the police action and other statements made to the police.

Fulton, justice minister in the government of former prime minister John Diefenbaker, was alone in his vehicle when it was involved in the collision.

Police said Fulton was "very upset" after the accident and officers decided to take him home.

LOUGHEED CALLS MARCH ELECTION

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed today ended weeks of speculation by calling a provincial election for Wednesday, March 14.

Lougheed said the first issue of the campaign will be the record of his government in social, economic and resource management policies of the last four years.

He listed as a second issue the management of the heritage savings trust fund that has grown to about $4 billion.

Party standing at dissolution was Progressive Conservatives 69, Social Credit 4, New Democratic Party 1, Independent 1.

The election comes after 7½ years of Progressive Conservative rule. It is the second winter vote in Alberta in 39 years.

Gov't Eyes Food Cost Steps

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Warren Allmand told the Commons Tuesday that the federal government is considering further action to try to curb rising food prices.

Tory agriculture critic John Wise said in an interview later he believes the government may be headed towards putting controls on food prices in a last-gasp effort to slow increases in grocery bills before a spring general election.

Wise noted Allmand did not deny suggestions the government would move to restrain food price increases even though he ruled out a re-introduction of wage and price controls.

Earlier Wise tried in the Commons to get Allmand to say what policies have been implemented under the government's national food strategy. Allmand said there is "slow but steady progress."

He repeated earlier promises of government action when it's ready to slow food price increases now running at 12 to 14 per cent annually. Allmand said they'll drop to nine to 10 per cent later in the year.

But he refused to list what action had been taken under the food strategy. Wise had no more luck when he tried Monday to get Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan to say what has been done. Whelan said he could produce a five-page list of accomplishments but wouldn't name any.

"If they've achieved something, they should give be able to give us one or two examples," Wise said.

He said controls on food prices would be further government tinkering with the free-market system and additional proof of the absence of a food strategy.

When announced in June, 1977, the strategy's goals were to provide safe, nutritious food at reasonable prices for consumers and producers.

But food prices have risen faster than the Consumer Price Index in the last few years and until mid-1978, farm incomes were falling instead of rising.

IT'S ALL IN THE BOUQUET

NORTH PIDDLE, Worcestershire (CP) — Businessman Peter Dodgson is proud of his village and his wine and has won his fight to honor both — well, almost.

Originally, he was refused permission to register his wine as Chateau Piddle. But he argued that French wines are named for the areas where they are produced.

So the officials relented half way. He may market the elixir under the name of his choice, but he won't be allowed an official entry in the register of trade names because they say the name is not an accurate description of the contents of the bottle.

Pierre Trudeau . . . Comic Book Hero

Times News Services

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau has achieved recognition over the years as a world leader, but he has lately won recognition in a completely different field — as a comic book hero.

In the last month, the prime minister's face has become familiar to more than a quarter-million young readers of Marvel Comics in North America, England, India, Japan, Australia and Singapore as a Canadian leader furious over the loss of his secret weapon, a mutant named "Wolverine".

Wolverine, according to his creator, Chris Claremont of the New York-based comic book empire, was less than grateful to the Canadian Defence Department for turning him into a super-powered mutant, and accepted an offer from the American superheroes, X-men, to join them and use his powers for all mankind.

Trudeau — identified only as "Mr. Prime Minister, but clearly recognizable by his face — wants him back, and orders Alpha Flight, Canada's own team of super-heroes, to reclaim him.

The climax is a titanic battle between Alpha Flight and the X-men that devastates Calgary.

The opening scene of the yarn, entitled Chaos In Canada, is the war room of the Canadian defence department where the sinister-looking prime minister is demanding the return of Wolverine.

The Alpha Flight mutants, working for the Canadian government, battle Wolverine and the X-men in Calgary right into the May issue of Uncanny X-Men. But in the end, Wolverine escapes back to the United States.

Head of the Alpha Flight, Major Maple Leafs, is really Dr. Hudson, an unmad sci-

Vander Zalm For Speed-Up

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Legislation will be introduced by the provincial government this year to speed up the process of getting rezoning and development approval from municipalities, Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Tuesday night.

At this time an application that might take six or eight weeks to receive the official go-ahead in Washington or Oregon could involve a wait of up to three years in some B.C. municipalities, he claimed.

Two key features of the legislation would be:

— Establishment of time limits for advisory boards and other local government agencies to deal with applications and return them to the referring council.

— Opportunity for the public to have its say at a far earlier stage in the approval process.

Vander Zalm also disclosed, following a 50-minute address to the annual meeting of the Broadmead Ratepayers' Association, that his ministry is looking at the possibility of introducing what he called a "Planning Act."

This would standardize across the province a whole range of regulations and requirements governing such things as sewers, storm drains, curbs and other services.

At present, he said, there is a bewildering number of such regulations, with nearly every municipality differing from its neighbor.

Because some municipal engineers come from Europe, they favor European designs and products and this, in turn, leads to material supply problems.

"I think we should be developing uniform standards for B.C., using B.C. products," the minister told reporters after the meeting.

Vander Zalm said his own exercise in deregulation is needed to cut down the intolerable delays now experienced in obtaining zoning and development approval from B.C. municipalities.

As a result, industries that might have located here have given up in frustration and gone south of the border.

Another shortcoming of the present system is that by the time affected residents can express their opinion at the public hearing stage, development proposals have achieved such a momentum that councils tend to be committed and citizens feel they cannot influence the decision.

Vander Zalm said he would like to see a procedure that would allow residents to voice their feelings at the beginning before developers have plunged into

More Winds On Way

SEATTLE (AP) — Power outages and flooding plagued parts of Washington today after the state's worst windstorm in 17 years, and flood waters threatened portions of Idaho and Utah.

The National Weather Service predicted more strong winds, from 60 to 90 kilometres an hour were in store for the Northwest today.

CP Profits Up 40%

MONTREAL (CP) - Canadian Pacific Ltd., Canada's largest corporation, has reported record profits in 1978 of $341 million, or $4.72 a share, compared with $247 million, or $3.41 a share in 1977.

The company attributed the gain to strong performance of both its transportation and CP Investments divisions in 1978.

The iron and steel, oil and gas, and forest products operations of CPI posted the greatest increases, while the subsidiary's hotels operations declined.

CP Ltd. predicted 1979 profits would equal 1978's record performance. The company said it also plans record capital investment of more than $1 billion for 1979.

Moslem Gunmen Slay U.S. Ambassador

NEW DELHI (AP) — Moslem gunmen shot and killed the U.S. ambassador to Afghanistan, Adolph Dubs, when security forces stormed a hotel in the Afghan capital of Kabul where Dubs was being held hostage today, the official Kabul radio reported.

The broadcast said all four kidnappers were killed. Officials at the U.S. embassy here said the gunmen had demanded freedom for three Shiite Moslem clergymen jailed by the leftist Afghan government.

Those officials said they do not know whether the 58-year-old ambassador was killed by his kidnappers or by police bullets.

In Washington, U.S. officials sharply criticized the Kabul government's decision to storm the building.

Kabul radio, in an announcement relayed to Washington, said Afghan police "tried their best to free the ambassador from the terrorists and the terrorists refused to free him."

The kidnappers took him to the Kabul Hotel in the heart of the city, took over a guest room and communicated their demands to authorities.

Three hours later, the kidnappers threatened to kill the ambassador in 10 minutes if their demands were not met.

The broadcast said the kidnappers then shot the ambassador.

See-Saw Battle for Embassy

Times News Services

TEHRAN — Scores of guerrillas firing automatic weapons stormed the U. S. embassy today, wounded two people and took the ambassador and 101 other Americans hostage before rival guerrillas rescued the Americans in a 3½-hour gun battle.

Major fighting also erupted today in the northwestern city of Tabriz and several hundred persons were killed.

Reports said fighting was going on in 21 areas in Tabriz and that there had been a major battle for control of the local radio station. The reports said military aircraft had been sent to the city, presumably to take part in fighting.

Guerrillas loyal to the new Iranian government said those who attacked the embassy in Tehran were Communists. One of the attackers also said Communists participated in the assault.

Premier Mehdi Bazargan left the first meeting of his new cabinet when informed of the attack, and a spokesman for the Ayatollah Khomeini said: "This is against the direct orders of the ayatollah, who has repeatedly stated that embassies should not be molested. Those attacking do not represent the revolution."

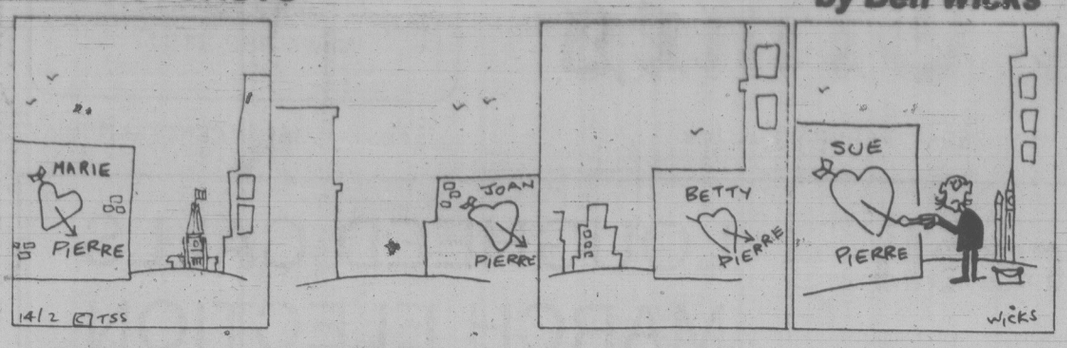

Bazargan, meanwhile, announced the appointment of seven cabinet members from among the Western-educated political veterans of the National Front, the liberal-leftist coalition which Mohammed Mossadegh founded more than 25 years ago to oppose the shah.

In Washington, the state department said it was considering a mass evacuation of 7,000 U.S. citizens from Iran following the attack on the embassy.

Department officials said a small contingent of U.S. Marines and evacuation helicopters have been "prepositioned" overseas for several days due to the situation in Iran. They were reported to be available in Italy and the Azores.

In a related development, the Soviet Union has offered the use of its territory for the evacuation of foreigners trying to leave Iran but all frontier crossings have been closed from the Iranian side, Western diplomats said Tuesday.

THE OUTCASTS by Ben Wicks

Zoning Speed-Up Eyed

the expense of land purchases, hiring architects and engineers and drawing up detailed plans.

As for the delays, the minister said they could be reduced drastically by instituting a time limit.

For example, where a council has to refer an application to a regional district or some other agency, the ground rules should state that "if we don't hear back from you in 30 days we will assume you have approved it."

Vander Zalm told the Broadmead ratepayers it might be late spring or early summer before he is able to introduce legislation instituting changes in B.C.'s regional government structure.

Ministry officials are studying the way such government is constituted in Alberta, Ontario and Washington state, and the minister hinted that he likes some features of Alberta's county system of government.

A county administration in that province, which can include incorporated areas, looks after roads, water supply, schools, hospitals and other services, he said, adding: "The amount of government and bureaucracy is almost one-third of what we have here."

Elsewhere in his wide-ranging speech, Vander Zalm indicated that property assessment changes might be in the offing, designed to relieve basic inequities and hardships that have come to his attention.

"Elderly people are saying, 'I have three acres, I've lived there 40 years, brought up my children and want to live there till I die. But I can't because there are siubdivisions developing around me and my land is assessed at such a rate I'm going to be forced out.'

"That's really pretty sad. It's not acceptable to us to see people who have pioneered this province being forced off their land and into an apartment simply because they can't afford to pay their taxes."

Vander Zalm Recalls Runaround in Surrey

Municipal Affairs Minister William Vander Zalm Tuesday cited his home town municipality, Surrey — where he used to be mayor — as an example of the nightmarish red tape and delays involved in approving rezoning and development proposals.

Vander Zalm said if such an application requires municipal as well as regional district approval, this is the route it follows:

The application goes first to Surrey council, which refers the matter to its advisory planning commission.

The commission reviews the application and sends it back to council, which then forwards it to the regional district.

The regional board passes the application to the regional planning committee, which considers it and then submits it to the technical planning committee. (Like most of the other groups involved, this body meets only once a month).

The technical planning committee sends it back to the regional planning committee, which refers the matter back to the board.

Next stop is the lower mainland review panel. After due deliberation the panel sends the application back to the regional board.

The board makes its final assessment and then refers the whole thing back to Surrey council.

"Then, if you're lucky," Vander Zalm told Broadmead ratepayers, "you'll get your rezoning three years after you applied."

The minister said that's the average sort of delay assuming things will proceed reasonably smoothly.

"But if at some stage down the line someone decides they don't like you, you can get held up a lot more."

BC Tel Seeks Two Firms

BURNABY (CP) — British Columbia Telephone Co. plans to acquire two telecommunications equipment manufacturing companies in an exchange of stock estimated at $47 million.

Gordon F. MacFarlane, B.C. Tel chairman and chief executive officer, said today the companies to be acquired are GTE Automatic Electric (Canada) Ltd. and GTE Lenkurt Electric (Canada) Ltd.

MacFarlane said the companies, now wholly-owned subsidiaries of General Telephone and Electronics Corp. of Stamford, Conn., are to become wholly-owned subsidiaries of B.C. Tel when approvals are obtained.

B.C. Tel is controlled by Anglo-Canadian Telephone Co. of Montreal which in turn is a wholly-owned subsidiary of General Telephone and Electronics.

Map valid until noon Thursday

The intense storm which swept across southern B.C. Tuesday has moved out of the province. Skies have cleared in the wake of the system and many areas had sunshine today. However, strong winds accompanied by a mixture of rain and snow moved onto the north coast overnight. The frontal system will slowly work its way to the south coast and interior overnight. Temperatures are expected to moderate Thursday in the northern interior as the disturbance brings milder air.

ENVIRONMENT CANADA WEATHER OFFICE 10 A.M. FORECAST

Queen enjoying Kuwaiti folk festival despite glaring sun

QUEEN KEEPS HER COOL IN BLAZING KUWAIT HEAT

Times News Services

KUWAIT — Queen Elizabeth, wearing dark glasses to shield her eyes from the desert sun, Tuesday inspected Kuwait's oil installations at Ahmedi then played host to Kuwaiti ruler Sheik Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah at dinner aboard the royal yacht Britannia.

Thousands of people, many of them British working in Kuwaiti oil installations, lined the streets to see the royal couple.

The couple was served fruit juice at the Ahmedi guest house before inspecting a gas-gathering centre in the desert and Kuwait's major oil refinery.

The Queen, bundled in a long-sleeved dress and wearing a hat with a veil in deference to the Moslem dress code, listened to a lecture on the fine points of oil technology in the desert kingdom.

But what apparently impressed the monarch most in the oil-bountiful kingdom was the weather over which she enthused. "The weather was awful when we left London," she said "It is lovely here."

The Queen appeared unfazed by the desert heat of Kuwait despite the long-sleeved dress she had been advised to wear to avoid offending her hosts.

But she did put on sunglasses at one point during the motorcade to ward off the intense glare of the desert sky.

The Royal couple later watched a folk festival under the shade of royal umbrellas and the Queen shook hands with about 60 children who took part.

Carter Pitch Ready For Mexico Oil Bid

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Carter flies to Mexico today on a trip which might yield energy agreements with considerable economic impact north of the U.S. as well as south of it.

During a three-day official visit, Carter is to discuss trade and immigration matters as well as oil and natural gas with Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo.

The meeting may prove to be unlike any other held by the presidents of the two countries. Mexico has long complained it has been treated as a poor relation by the U.S., a complaint many U.S. officials concede is justified.

But now the poor relation has something rich Uncle Sam wants — oil reserves that may eventually prove to be about the size of Saudi Arabia's.

While Mexico sees the value of selling fuel to the U.S., the country now is in a stronger bargaining position than ever before. If it uses its new oil-powered muscle to drive a tough bargain with the U.S., spillover effects may be felt in Canada.

Mexico wants to sell natural gas to the U.S. as well as oil, but it wants prices far higher than those Canada charges for its natural gas exports to the U.S.

Energy department officials say they have received strong indications that if Mexico gets a high price for its natural gas, Canada would raise its export prices.

A new energy department study calculates that if Mexico got the price structure it sought in past negotiations with the U.S., and Canada followed suit with a price jump, U.S. consumers would pay an extra $10 billion between now and 1985 for gas imports from the neighboring countries.

Negotiations between the U.S. and Mexico have been at a standstill for more than a year because of U.S. rejection of the Mexican natural gas pricing proposal, which ties prices for the fuel to the price of New York-delivered heating oil — a product produced and priced by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

When the negotiations were stopped, the price of natural gas under the Mexican formula would have been about $2.60 a thousand cubic feet. If the contract had gone through, the price by now would be more than $3.

Canada, on the other hand, charges $2.16 a thousand — a price set in 1977. Canadian gas exports total a trillion cubic feet a year.

IRELAND CLOSES POSTAL SERVICE

DUBLIN (Reuter) — The Irish post office today asked the public to stop mailing letters because a strike by 13,000 postmen, telephonists and counter clerks is to start Monday.

Advertisements in newspapers said: "Please do not post any letters from now until further notice."

Post offices also stopped accepting parcels.

Postal workers want raises of up to 37 per cent and have only been offered eight per cent. The strikers have promised to maintain emergency telephone service.

Garbagemen Back on Job

Times News Services

LONDON — A strike that turned the centre of London into a garbage dump ended Tuesday when collectors agreed to go back to work.

A national strike for more pay by four public service unions continued, but the 540 dustmen in Westminster said they have had enough. "Nobody else would come out in support," a shop steward said.

He said they were offered generous overtime pay plus bonus to clear up the mess. They will begin today on sidewalk and back-alley heaps, which have been declared fire and health risks, before starting on about 22,000 tons of garbage piled at dumps in public squares and car parks.

The Borough of Westminster contains London's smartest shops, stores, restaurants and tourist sights, such as Buckingham Palace and Westminster Abbey.

Meanwhile, the Callaghan government hopes it can ratify a new agreement with labor unions today aimed at reducing strikes and limiting wage increases.

The pact, drawn up at talks between the two sides during the few months, is expected to be settled today.

Details have not been announced but sources say it will state that strikes should only take place as a last resort.

Also proposed are annual meetings between government ministers, employers and union leaders to assess the country's economic prospects and how large wage raises should be.

One draft proposal aims at an annual inflation rate of less than five per cent within three years from when the pact is signed. The current rate is about eight per cent.

The pact has been worked on against a background of some of the worst industrial troubles since the general strikes in the mid 1920s.

The Conservative party opposition dismisses the pact as an attempt by the Labor government to win the coming general election by showing it can handle the trade unions.

The unions, which by tradition give Labor moral and financial support, would also prefer to see the current government retain power.

Callaghan can hold off calling a general election until October, when his government's five-year mandate ends and when industrial troubles may have subsided.

It Couldn't Be Worse

The slowness with which the 1979 Greater Victoria school board conducts its business is past being a joke. When the first meeting of the new board dragged out over three evenings, observers assumed this was merely the result of a new board needing to find its feet and settle down.

When the agenda for the second meeting was abandoned after three evenings with some items still remaining to be discussed, the problem became a little more serious. After all, the administrators need board approval for some of those items before they can be implemented.

On Monday evening, the board started its third agenda at a well-attended meeting at Northridge elementary school. (There is surely some perverse irony in the fact that the meeting was held at a school in the extreme northwest corner of the district when the major agenda item of public interest concerned Oak Bay high school in the southeast of the district.) The board met in public, as it always does, for 2½ hours.

At the end of that time it had completed the first eight items of a 50-item agenda — and three of the completed items were "call to order," "acknowledgement of special guests" (there weren't any), and "approval of minutes" of previous meetings.

Still to be discussed were motions on such controversial questions as the tenure of vice-principals, district-wide achievement tests and the strongly emotional issue of some of the board's own procedures. Also still to come are all the necessary bureaucratic items that legally must have board approval before they can go ahead — including all the ones left over from the January meeting.

Since the rest of the board's week is cluttered up with meetings on the budget — which has to be in to the provincial education ministry by Feb. 15 — the remainder of the agenda was put off until next Monday. The chances of it being completed in another 2½-hour session range from slim to none.

Presumably at that point yet another session will be called, or else the board will again abandon the last items on the agenda, putting itself still further behind to start the fourth meeting of the year. If the same pace continues for the rest of 1979, the board will just about have finished July's business when it comes time for the November elections.

There are many reasons for the grinding slowness. Some of them doubtless have to do with the deep mistrust that has arisen between the two board factions — the so-called budget balancers vs the so-called proponents of educational quality.

But some of them also have to do with the board system itself. For all intents and purposes, the board has no committees. The only two that function well now deal with student suspensions and work with the chairman to plan the agendas of board meetings. There are no committees that regularly deal with the day-to-day, routine administrative matters, handling the details in committee meetings and then making recommendations to the board.

The result is that every question a trustee has, no matter how mundane, no matter how technical, has to be dealt with at the board meeting. The details of construction work, the exact wording of course outlines, the status of ongoing negotiations with another school board,— all have to take up time at the board meetings.

Another result of this is that the procedures at board meetings often have to be extremely loose in order to allow any free discussion of an item at all.

How much better it might be if the board went to a committee system roughly parallelling that of Victoria or Oak Bay. There the council members are divided into two committees, known for convenience as A and B. Each committee has specific areas of responsibility; each is set up to reflect approximately the political balance of council; the mayor, or chairman, is a member of each committee.

Almost all the detailed work of council is carried out at the committee level. It is at committee that aldermen can receive updated reports on the status of projects. It is at committee that they can argue about the best precise wording of motions. It is to committee that members of the public can first come for informal hearing of their complaints or requests.

Committees can make no decisions on their own. They can only make recommendations to their respective councils. Therefore, no council member need feel that decisions are being made in which he has no part.

What happens in practice, however, is that the members of council are almost always willing to trust the decisions of their colleagues on the other committee, at least in technical and detailed matters. If real problems arise with a committee recommendation at council, the matter usually is sent back to the committee for another look.

The system has two major advantages: most issues get a more thorough airing than they would in the more pressurized atmosphere of the council chamber itself, and the councils usually clear their bimonthly agendas easily in 2½ to three hours.

Surely the school board could at least try such a system for a few months to see if it would work. It could hardly make things worse than they are now.

RICHARD GWYN

We're Not Doing So Badly

OTTAWA — Usually, countries only put themselves through the agony of trying to rewrite their constitution after a war, a civil war, a revolution or liberation from colonial rule. People usually can only be persuaded to change institutions and political practices they've grown accustomed to when they know perfectly well that they have no chance but to do so.

Would you care now to guess how many countries have succeeded during the past 100 years in changing their constitution during times of peace?

None.

Not a single, blessed one. To be quite exact, Switzerland did so 105 years ago: in 1874, Switzerland gave its constitution a "total revision" to make it more democratic.

Nobody Else Succeeded

Canada thus is attempting the almost impossible, as is, with so far an equal lack of success, Belgium following a near civil war provoked by language riots between Walloons and Flemings.

To make matters yet more difficult, English-Canadians, though not French-speaking ones, don't take constitutions that seriously. We know that Britain has no constitution at all, yet gets on perfectly well. Whatever else Britain lacks, it doesn't lack for civil liberties, which is what constitutions mostly are about. By contrast, Soviet Russia has a magnificent bill of rights, which together with the right number of kopecks will get you a ride on the Moscow subway.

Viewed from these perspectives of Anglo-Saxon skepticism about any policy other than muddling through, and the fact that no other country has managed the job in 100 years, the 11 first ministers are not doing all that badly.

True, after a year of huffing and puffing and wheeling and dealing, they have managed to agree on exactly one item. On this item, the monarchy, they have agreed to do nothing, thus consigning to the paper shredder all the clauses in Prime Minister Trudeau's draft constitutional bill of last summer by which he had hoped to raise the status of the governor-general. In fact — a triumph this of muddling through — Trudeau since has accomplished most of what he set out to do by his imaginative appointment of Ed Schreyer to the post.

At last week's constitutional conference, Ontario Premier Bill Davis for once used words to make a point rather than to muffle it. He warned against and "inflated spirit of crisis." Davis added that, "a new constitution will not build a new Canada."

True. In fact, this new Canada already is being built.

Consider Quebec. Bill 101 implements more sweeping changes in language legislation than has been effected in any independent country since the Second World War, with a couple of exceptions like Malaysia. While still a lowly province, hobbled by the battered old British North America Act, Quebec has been able to achieve its essential goal of being "maitre ches nous" — master of its own house. The other trappings of sovereignty, like embassies abroad, is just ceremonial.

SWITZERLAND
. . . they're still trying

Consider as well the west, which for a decade has been feeling throughly alienated. Yet the west already has altered, decisively, and irrevocably, the map of Canada. Economic power and wealth and population are shifting west. Political power is beginning to — there will be more western MPs than Quebec ones in the next parliament; the new governor-general is a westerner; the next prime minister may be.

Westerners these days are feeling less alienated because, their affluence aside, they know they are being listened to. Similarly, within Quebec, French-English relations have improved dispite Bill 101, simply because francophones now feel self-confident.

Compared with changes of this magnitude, all the crossed t's and dotted i's of a new constitution amount, at most, to a footnote.

Even the specific constitutional changes over which the first ministers are expending so much time and effort are more a matter of form than of substance. For instance, Ottawa is ready to limit its spending power for the uncomplicated reason that it has no more money to spend. Nova Scotia and Newfoundland are clamoring for jurisdiction over coastal fisheries even though they are today doing almost nothing in the areas where they already have jurisdiction — onshore processing and marketing.

Swiss Still Trying

As a last example, Trudeau's personal constitutional holy grail is a charter of human rights. The simple and self-evident truth is that even without such a charter, the state of civil liberties in Canada today is probably superior even to that in Britain.

So we don't need a new constitution at all? We do, but only for a contradictory reason. By announcing that our existing constitution needed to be changed, the first ministers have effectively undermined its credibility. We need a new constitution, in other words, because, having said out loud that we need a new one, we no longer can go back to the old one.

Without fully realizing what they were doing, the first ministers have managed to clamber together into a very lumpy bed. They've no choice now but to roll around in it, at a guess, since the spur of doing something before Quebec's referendum is gone, for the next five years. When the work at last is done, it will at least get Canada into the Guinness Book of Records. Right after Switzerland which, believe it or not, has spent the last 10 years trying to rewrite its constitution again.

Didn't Say That

I take strong exception to statements attributed to myself in your article Rosy Jobless Picture Painted? carried in the Feb. 7 edition of the Times.

After being interviewed in my office for the article — City Jobless Rate 11.4% But Easing which appeared in your Jan. 6 edition, it was brought to my attention that Statistics Canada had changed the population data base from the 1971 census to that of the 1976 census.

Your reporter was phoned immediately to point out that this could cause difficulties in comparing the December and January unemployment figures as we had discussed this earlier. I pointed out that I understood that Statistics Canada had in the past used the 1971 census figure to which was added an estimated growth rate to arrive at a population figure. Last month, this was changed and the 1976 census figures used.

The article states I said: "The area's unemployment rate has been higher than announced for at least a year." In fact, your reporter made this statement and I replied that "those are your words, not mine," and that while it was a possibility, it could go either way. Your reporter then states I said: "It has become clear the estimate is too high and so it has been revised downwards."

Again, not my words, as I have no idea of what the figure is until Statistics Canada releases it. Your reporter then asked me if it were possible to find this out and cover it in our usual mid-month news release to the media. He was told our regional economist in Vancouver would be contacted, who in turn would contact Statistics Canada to see if this was available.

The article then goes on to say that "the regional economists of the CEC had been using the 1971 census of Victoria plus an estimate of increases in the population, etc. etc. . . . A comparison with the 1976 census, however, has shown the estimate was too high."

Your reporter knows full well that Statistics Canada provide this information and, again, these are his remarks, not mine.

We are very disappointed in this type of reporting. — W. F. Pickering, Manager, Canada Employment Centre.

Royal Theatre

I am researching the history of the Royal Theatre and I would appreciate hearing from any of your readers who have photographs or information regarding the original decoration of the exterior and interior of the building. I am particularly interested in its 1913 configuration. All information and photographs will be returned and all contributors will be credited. — Thomas R. Palfrey, 941 Meares Street.

Butt Out

I am concerned about the lack of interest in the health of participants of programs in the Esquimalt Recreation Centre.

Observers of various swimming activities who smoke not only create an atmosphere uncomfortable for other observers but set sickly examples of adulthood for those youngsters in or out of the pool.

Surely with all the excellent aquatic and recreation programs that have been created to promote good health and wellbeing in our centre, you can see the extraordinary contradiction.

I am asking the administration consider this mattter in deep earnest and prohibit smoking entirely in our Recreatin Centre. — Mrs. Bonny Jackson, 1158 Old Esquimalt Road.

At $4-plus a pound, few pensioners can afford fresh salmon.

Fancy Fish

We were in the supermarket lately and noticed people looking at something in the frozen meat department. They were looking at a salmon about seven or eight pounds in weight. It was priced at $33.

We could hardly believe what we saw. As we are old age pensioners, it was just a matter of curiosity and way beyond what we could afford. On the other side of the aisle there were some roasts of beef at between $10 and $13. Around the corner, there were vegetables, small cauliflowers at $1.50 etc. If things continue, we shall have to copy the New Brunswick Saturday night dinner of home-cooked pork and beans.

When you realize the world's population increase is approximately between 75 and 100 million a year, there is only one way food can go and that is up in price. Not one acre of farm land should be taken out of production.

The old age pensioners are lucky — we got a huge raise in pension of $2.70 in the last three months. — G. R. Hunter, Summerland, B.C.

What to Do for $

The time is past when we took pride in the fact that our Canadian dollar was worth more than its American counterpart!

Our minister of finance is trying very hard to convince us that a low dollar (about 84 cents U.S.) is a blessing as it boosts our foreign trade. This might be true if we were an exporting nation, but the fact is we import many goods which we do not produce.

If a low dollar was such a blessing, why has our national debt increased to incredible heights and we are burdened with interest which have to be paid in the currencies of our creditors?

Another advantage of a low dollar, again according to Jean Chretien, is that this will discourage Canadians from travelling abroad. This is true to a very small extent. In fact, some people postpone the purchases of many items, just to have enough money to get away from it all. Travel restrictions do not work to the advantage of airlines, and should they become more severe it may adversely affect the employment of many people in this field: reservation clerks, travel agents, and so on.

Instead of creating more commissions, task forces, study groups, our government should seriously tackle the problem of our currency and seek the advice of competent persons such as the heads of all our chartered banks and other financial institutions.

Our government could devote at least 10 per cent of the revenue from Loto-Canada to paying our international debts and take other measures such as a reduction of the Senate.

The public will certainly stand behind any honest effort to improve our economy by reducing the amount of interest that is going abroad and could be used to create jobs at home. Of course, some grants going now to sports ventures and other amenities would have to be curtailed, but nothing worthwhile is achieved without cutting the superfluous for the essential. We can't go on making steps longer than our legs! — E. J. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.

Redeem Promise

I appreciated the article B.C. Promise Unfulfilled — Still No Aid to Viets in the Times Feb. 3.

That promise sprang from a deep feeling of compassion and wrongdoing. Vietnam received more destruction through sophisticated weapons of modern war than anything that occurred during the Second World War. It is so easy to forget the destruction now that the cameras have turned elsewhere: but the scars inflicted by the war will not go away so easily.

Maimed and damaged bodies, burns from napalm and venereal disease are a part of the lives of thousands of Vietnamese today, without the medical facilities to help to heal them.

History has a very long memory, and the actions of a large power against a lesser (and I take into account the initial blindness of the United States owing to their crusade against communism — an approach which many Canadians shared) may well account for the demoralizing lack of faith in government that afflicts the U.S. and Canada today.

Out of a sense of moral commitment, $2¼ million for Vietnam aid was voted by the B.C. legislature in 1973; now in 1979 — the Year of the Child — let us fulfill that promise made to the children of Vietnam.

We have the unique opportunity in this Year of the Child to erase two words: Promise Unfulfilled. — Rosamund Sorensen, 1564 Gladstone Avenue.

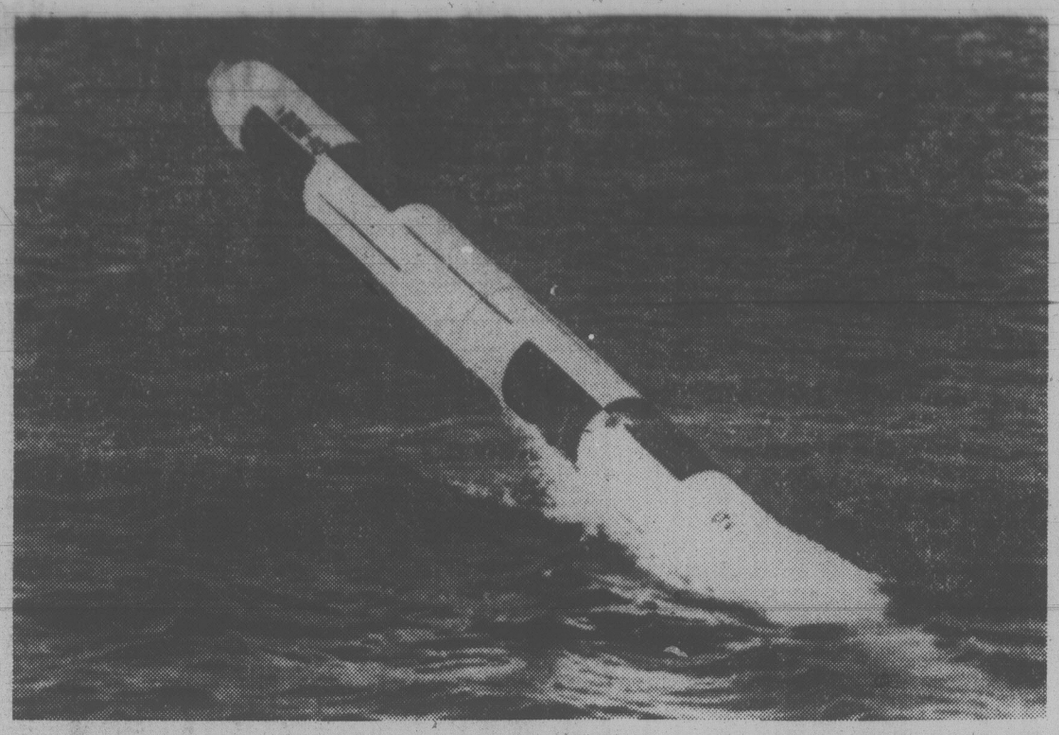

More Signs

Upon moving to Victoria a few months ago, I soon noticed the surprising lack of street signs. I was sometimes lost, not because I lacked a street map, but because of the absence of signs. Sometimes out of the corner of my eye, I would observe one sign at an intersection, but with traffic behind me, I would be unable to slow down to read it.

It seems to me that every intersection should have signs on at least two corners. These would be of great help to new residents as well as to the hundreds of tourists who visit the city. — W. B. Holliday, 45-933 Admirals Road.

Is the U.S. Preparing To Wage Atom War?

U.S. Navy Cruise missile blasts from submarine in California coast test range

THE PROGRESSIVE
An Editorial

To some it may always have been obvious, and others will continue to regard it as preposterous, but we can no longer sustain a reasonable doubt about a simple truth so enormous it still seems beyond belief: the government of the United States is preparing to wage nuclear war, and there is no power in sight that can stop it.

President Carter does not put it that way, but the evidence is plain enough — in his new budget, in his new military programs, in his proposed "arms limitation" agreement with the Soviet Union, and in his final retreat from efforts to prevent nuclear war.

Neither those who favor still more rapid escalation of the nuclear arms race nor those who would prefer to slow it down talk openly about its logical consequences. Today's hawks and doves debate the means of implementing war, not the policy itself.

Two years ago, when Carter entered the White House, there seemed grounds for hope that the powers of the presidency might finally be directed against the country's unceasing preparations for nuclear war. The new president spoke of reducing the military budget and working toward "zero nuclear weapons."

Now his mid-term programs testify to the futility of that hope. The military budget is again to be increased by about 10 per cent, as it was last year, and the nuclear weapons stockpile is on the verge of unprecedented expansion and modernization.

Congress is being asked for a massive underground silo network to give mobility to the intercontinental missile strike force and assure its survivability in a nuclear war. Third-generation submarine-launched missiles are going into full production. Missile warheads will be made more accurate to enhance the precision of our nuclear strike capability. The neutron bomb will be produced and stockpiled for battlefield use.

These weapons systems all are new, and they represent a qualitative escalation in the nuclear arms race. They are accompanied by unmistakable signs that the country is being positioned for nuclear war. Civil defense is being revived as a practical policy, a retired general has become the nation's chief arms control and disarmament negotiator, the secretary of defence had ordered a new study of how to fight "limited" nuclear wars.

There is a tendency in some quarters to discount these manifestations as "tough talk" designed to win Senate votes for ratification of the second Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty with the Soviet Union. But SALT II, like its predecessor, already contains so many built-in invitations to nuclear arms escalation that ratification has become irrelevant. Carefully drafted to suit the demands posed by the nuclear weapons establishments on both sides, it sets meaningless numerical limits and leaves the way wide open for qualitative improvements in the capacity to wage nuclear war.

If the United States and the world are to be spared the consequences of that course of action, the remedy will clearly not be found in the Carter administration or the constituency that sets its goals and priorities. Whatever his impulses may once have been, the president now seems trapped by the momentum that long ago captured others no less genuinely devoted to the cause of peace.

The domestic opposition to the nuclear arms race has been pathetically enfeebled by its tacit acceptance of assumptions that underlie the build-up. One such assumption is the necessity of nuclear "deterrence", another is the importance of an American global presence. Acquiescence in these assumptions has vitiated the peace movement from the start and helped fashion the SALT agreements into instruments of surrender to the military. The fundamental issue of nuclear war has been reduced, as John Cort recently observed in Win magazine, to a "debate over the fine-tuning of the American military machine."

The arguments advanced by some of the stauchest critics of the Pentagon often carry unconscious and unintended advocacy of the doctrines of nuclear war. Thus, Senator William Proxmire of Wisconsin, in a recent statement decrying the neutron bomb because it blurs the distinction between conventional and nuclear war, declared: "Deterrence is the drawing of a line beyond which the enemy knows he cannot go without a devastating, unacceptable retaliation. Deterrence must be credible and calculable. Both sides must know just where the deterrence line is."

In opposing one nuclear weapon, Proxmire lends support to another. By unmistakable implication he sanctions the notion that the nuclear deterrent is something worth safeguarding. The Pentagon is seldom at a loss to show how the endangered deterrent needs still more and more protection.

Similarly, The New Republic, a voice for liberal opposition to the nuclear arms race, argues in a recent editorial that some of President Carter's current proposals go beyond simple protection of the nuclear deterrent, but then concedes: "We could do that merely by hiding our present land-based missile force, by making it mobile or by replacing it with seabased missiles or slow, accurate cruise missiles."

Criticism of one line of nuclear strategy thus becomes an endorsement of a variety of nuclear options, none of which is inconsistent with the Pentagon's overall strategy of endless nuclear escalation.

Why the perpetual build-up? For the most part it has been justified in the name of deterrence — the protection of the credibility of a deterrent which must be maintained to protect the U.S. position in the world. The link between deterrence and global presence is nearly stated by Fred Ikle, consultant on national security affairs, in a recent Fortune magazine article speculating on what might happen if the Soviet Union, undeterred by the United States, should move into such places as Yugoslavia and Pakistan: "Decisions in such contingencies would, of course, be influenced by many factors that are not now discernible, but the case for (U.S.) intervention has clearly been made more difficult by the vast expansion of Soviet military power."

That nuclear weapons are a means of projecting U.S. power along the periphery of the Soviet Union should come as no revelation, but the authorship of the article tells much about the orientation of those who regard themselves as the "loyal opposition" to the nuclear arms race. Until two years ago, Fred Ikle was the director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

Unquestionning accommodation to the basic assumptions of nuclear weapons strategy — deterrence and the projection of global power — has made the arms control community the unwitting handmaiden of those who build the nuclear war machine. Whether the issue is a particularly objectionable weapon or a particularly outrageous doctrine, even the occasional victories of these good losers are usually merely defeats in disguise.

The reluctance to challenge those assumptions seems deeply ingrained among those who have long carried the banners of token opposition. It stems from the ties — professional, cultural, and economic — which bind the traditionalists to their colleagues in the weapons community, from shared perceptions (differing only in degree) of the role of America in the world, and from a simple unwillingness to pay the personal price of fundamental dissent.

But each new step in the spiraling nuclear arms race, now driven to a faster pace by the inevitable narrowing of America's long early lead, brings a fresh reminder of the price the world pays for continuing acquiescence in the false assumptions underlying our national policy.

To the impending prospect of nuclear war itself is added the ever-mounting cost of the preparations for war. The toll is clear enough in President Carter's new budget, where increased military expenditures will freeze or reduce the level of virtually every social and economic program that might contribute to the real strength of the nation.

The unimaginable price of nuclear war and the mounting price of preparations for war underline the primacy of this issue for all Americans. Just as the nuclear arms race increasingly becomes the obstacle that impedes progress toward other national goals, so disarmament becomes the essential avenue through which other goals must be attained.

It took the militancy of the American peace movement to dissuade President Nixon from issuing a nuclear threat against Vietnam in 1970. Today, the threat of nuclear war has a different kind of visibility — and an incomparably greater urgency. Nothing other than a militant new peace movement, massively supported by millions of Americans linked in a common cause, is likely to stem the long drift that has now become a rush toward nuclear holocaust. That movement is not yet in sight. And so the preparations continue.

A decade ago, when Washington's war planners professed that they wanted to extricate themselves from Vietnam but did not know how, the peace movement came up with a simple and effective answer — "The way to stop is to stop." That answer applies with even greater force to the monstrous danger posed by the nuclear arms race. The way to stop is to stop.

The Military Budget Increased Again As New Weapons Systems Added To Enhance Nuclear Strike Capability

Aborigines Seek Billions for Loss of Lands

By ROBERT MILLIKEN
Manchester Guardian

SYDNEY — The award last week of the Australian of the Year to the young aboriginal leader, Galarwuy Yunupingo, was painful as well as a triumph to the Aboriginal rights movement.

While Yunupingo was receiving his award at a lunch given by Melbourne's white establishment, Aborigines elsewhere were quietly proceeding with a bold court challenge, in which they are suing the British and Australian governments for £11 billions in compensation for the loss of traditional land.

The case is regarded as one of the greatest acts of audacity in Australia, so much that most of the press and nearly all politicians refuse to take it seriously. The claim has already been through the High Court of Australia, which turned it down in 1977. The Aborigines then appealed to the full bench of the court whose judgment is expected soon.

If that judgment is also unsatisfactory, they are preparing to take their battle before the International Court. The Australian court writ has been taken out by Paul Coe, the 29-year-old chairman of the Aboriginal Legal Service in Sydney, and endorsed by the National Aboriginal Conference, a quasi parliamentary body representing all the country's aborigines.

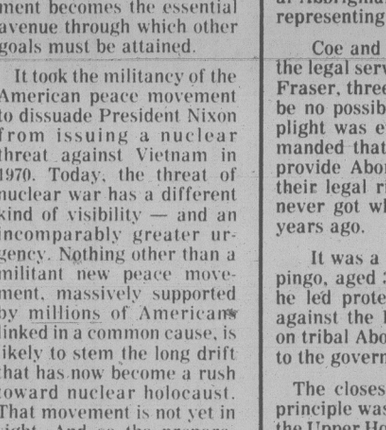

Coe and Bruce Miles, a white lawyer employed by the legal service, wrote to the prime minister, Malcolm Fraser, three weeks ago pointing out that "there would be no possible credit to Australia" if the Aborigines' plight was exposed in international forums. They demanded that the British and Australian governments provide Aborigines with a settlement treaty defining their legal rights under white rule — something they never got when the British colonized the country 191 years ago.

It was a land issue which brought Galarwuy Yunupingo, aged 30, to national prominence last year when he led protests by blacks in the Northern Territory against the Fraser government over uranium mining on tribal Aboriginal land there. Yunupingo later bowed to the government's demands.

The closest Australia has come to confronting this principle was in a resolution passed three years ago by the Upper House of the Federal Parliament, the Senate, accepting that the Aborigines "were in possession of this entire nation prior to the 1788 First Fleet landing at Botany Bay." It also urged the former Labor government to admit prior land ownership by Aborigines, and to introduce legislation to compensate them. Nothing has ever been done to implement it.

The enormous compensation now being claimed is based on an estimate that the average white Australian owns land worth £5,700, compared with £3.7 for the average Aborigine. The £11 billion would be needed, says Coe, to raise each of Australia's 250,000 Aborigines to white living standards, plus compensating them for the loss and destruction of their culture, language and legal system.

A Valentine's Day Quiz

By GARY LAUTENS

For the past 15 years we've worried about giving the little ones a sex education, but we've overlooked something more important — romance. We've chosen plumbing over poetry.

To prove my point, I've prepared a Romance Quiz for today and invite you to see how you rate in this all-important part of life.

1. You are given a single yellow rose by your boy friend. Do you (a) think it's a new halter top from Denmark and try to slip into it, (b) light up one of the thorns and smoke it, waiting for it to turn you into a volcano of passion, (c) hold it between your teeth in a comic pose and do a Spanish dance, (d) place it tenderly in an old Skippy peanut butter jar with water, and reward your boy friend with a flutter of the eyes?

2. Your girl friend suggests a walk in the rain. Do you (a) say the bus is faster, (b) tell her you're just getting over an awful cold and would sooner watch the Leafs on TV, (c) ask her to wait a few minutes while you rush down to the nearest army-navy store where you can get a tent, a groundsheet, and enough groceries for breakfast, (d) go for the walk, throwing away your umbrella at some point and breaking out in a light-hearted chorus of Singing In The Rain?

3. When you're in the movies, a loved one leans over and whispers "Je t'aime!" in your ear. Do you (a) ask him not to talk dirty while King Kong is in danger, (b) seize the opportunity to grab his popcorn while he's distracted, (c) tell him his nose is running, (d) look into his face and quote a stanza or two of Elizabeth Barrett Browning ("How do I love thee? Let me count the ways . . .")?

4. You're at the dinner table and she insists on candelight. Do you (a) complain that you can't find the outer cut of the roast, (b) make some naughty remark about the symbolism of the candle, (c) try to peel the candle drips during a lull in the conversation and roll the wax into tiny balls with your fingers, (d) drop to one knee, kiss the hem of her apron, and declare yourself completely unworthy of beauty beside which Venus herself pales in comparison?

5. A hankie slips out of your pocket and a young man retrieves it for you. Do you (a) make a grab for your waist to make sure it's your hankie you've dropped, and not something more important, (b) blow your nose on it immediately and announce, "Yes, it's mine," (c) accuse him of being a sexist who obviously doesn't think a woman can pick up a hankie for herself, (d) tell him to keep it (provided it's clean) as a remembrance of an important moment in your life?

6. You find a note in your lunch bag at noon that says simply, "Hurry home!" Do you, (a) call the house immediately and ask the wife if this is the day you're supposed to take the kids to the dentist, (b) ask the other boys at work if any of them got the wrong lunch bag, (c) complain about having cheese sandwiches two days in a row, (d) tell the boss you're leaving the office early, and pop a breath freshener in your mouth as you pull into the driveway?

7. The person you're dating has just asked you to fly away with him to Paris. Do you (a) call your lawyer and ask him to draw up a property agreement, (b) call your room mate and tell him it's all off between you and him, (c) call the drug store for a new prescription, (d) call the clergyman of your choice, your folks, and your best friend, the one who sings O Promise me without cracking on the high notes?

The romantic answer in each case is (d).

How did you do?

Well, happy Valentine's day anyway.

business

Dom. Bridge

Dominion Bridge Co. Ltd. reports record profits of $34.4 million, or $3.22 a share for the year ended Dec. 31, 1978, up 21 per cent from $28.5 million, or $2.68 a share, in 1977.

Sales were $886 million, up 52 per cent from $583 million a year earlier. All figures are after extraordinary items.

Company chairman Kenneth Barclay said that 34 per cent of operating profits came from business units added in the December, 1977, acquisition of Amtel Inc.

Amtel was bought by Dominion Bridge's U.S. subsidiary, Amca International Corp., of Hanover, N. H.

Dominion Bridge gets 91 per cent of profit from international operations, most of which comes from the U.S., and only nine per cent from Canadian operations.

Scott Paper

Scott Paper Ltd. reports net income of $4,239,000 or $1.75 as share for the year ended Dec. 31, 1978, up 15.9 per cent compared with $3,659,000 or $1.52 a share in 1977.

Sales climbed 12.2 per cent to $116,539,000 in 1978, compared with $103,884,000 in 1977.

The company said gains in sales and earnings resulted from well-balanced performances throughout the company, adding that increased earnings follow the absorbing of training and start-up expenses of the newly acquired plant in Lennoxville, Que.

Canada Cement

Canada Cement Lafarge Ltd. reported profits of $26.5 million, or $1.36 a share for the year ended Dec. 31, 1978, up from $22.4 million, or $1.14 a share in 1977.

Sales were up 22 per cent to $535 million, reflecting higher cement exports to the United States, a company statement said.

Fourth-quarter profits were $8.6 million, or 45 cents a share, an increase from $6.8 million, or 35 cents a share, a year earlier.

Sales during the fourth quarter increased by 29 per cent to $151 million, "partly because favorable autumn weather in most of Western Canada resulted in an exceptionally high level of construction activity."

The construction spending outlook for the year is mixed, the statement said, with residential housing likely to remain weak but capital spending by government and industry expected to improve.

"On balance, cement consumption should begin to recover after four years of moderate decline."

Algoma Steel

Algoma Steel Corp. Ltd. reports 1978 earnings of $77.1 million or $5.79 a share, up from $37.5 million or $2.62 the previous year.

While production, sales, shipments and earnings reached record levels, they fell short of providing an adequate return on invested capital, the company said.

"Further improvement in margins is necessary to provide returns that will ensure the corporation's ability to make investments required to maintain its favorable position in competitive steel markets, maintain stable employment and provide adequate returns to shareholders."

Equity in earnings from subsidiary Dominion Bridge Co. Ltd. increased to $22.6 million from $16.2 millionin 1977.

The company said work will begin soon on a new steelworks facility.

IBM Canada

IBM Canada Ltd. had net income of $104.3 million in 1978, up from $98.2 million the previous year. Its gross revenue rose to $1.1 billion from $989.2 million. Included in the gross revenue were exports to 80 countries totalling $294.5 million compared with $277.4 million in 1977.

PWA-Crash Lawyer Changes Course

VANCOUVER (CP) — The United States lawyer acting for the estates of 27 persons killed in the fiery crash of a Pacific Western Airlines jet in Cranbrook, B.C. last year said Monday he is no longer pursuing suits against the airline in U.S. courts.

Aviation lawyer Gerry Sterns said in a telephone interview from San Francisco that suits against the Alberta government-owned airline should be decided in Canadian courts.

Sterns said he decided to concentrate on product liability suits on behalf of the estates in U.S. courts against The Boeing Company, manufacturer of the jet, and Rohr Industries, which built the aircraft's thrust reversers.

A coroner's jury was told the Boeing 737 crashed after a thrust reverser, which brakes the aircraft on landing, popped open after the jet aborted a touchdown, causing it to nosedive into the ground.

Sterns said including PWA in the suits would make it more difficult for U.S. courts to handle the actions taken against the manufacturers.

The lawyer said he expected Boeing would try to have the cases declared beyond the jurisdiction of U.S. courts, but he would oppose any such attempt.

Anti-Share-Plan Poll Cited

Conservative leader Vic Stephens says a poll of two vacant provincial ridings indicates opposition to Premier Bill Bennett's planned giveaway of shares in the B.C. Resources Investment Corp.

Stephens said Tuesday that a professional telephone poll of 400 residents of the ridings of North Vancouver-Capilano and North Vancouver-Seymour shows only Social Credit supporters favor Bennett's plan to give all eligible B.C. residents five free shares in the Crown corporation.

Others polled oppose the plan three to two, he said.

Stephens said that it will cost more than $1 million to print the application forms, information books, prospectus and share certificates.

The two ridings were left vacant by the resignations of former cabinet minister Jack Davis and Liberal leader Gordon Gibson.

Coastal Tree Body Formed

A government-industry council has been formed to work toward development of better trees in B.C.'s coastal region, Forests Minister Tom Waterland announced Tuesday.

Waterland said in a news release that representatives of the industry and his ministry will be on the council.

He said prime objective of the council will be establishment of tree-seed orchards from which genetically-improved seed can be obtained.

Bennett Leaves Mair To Handle Dam Talks

Premier Bill Bennett said Tuesday he will not become personally involved in negotiations with Seattle Mayor Charles Royer over raising of the Ross Dam.

Royer has asked Bennett for a meeting on the issue, but the premier said that Environment Minister Rafe Mair will be conducting negotiations for the province.

Bennett would not say whether Washington's current power shortage will give B.C. an advantage in negotiations.

Stealing Clothes?

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A man who broke into a home wearing only a pair of women's knee-high black boots was sentenced to six months in prison when he appeared in county court here Monday.

Cecil Boyle, 20, of Langley, was convicted of breaking and entering. County court Judge L. M. McDonald said he sentenced Boyle to prison because the offence was committed while Boyle was on probation.

Meet Faulkner

CRANBROOK (CP) — The St. Mary's Indian band has asked federal Indian Affairs Minister Hugh Faulkner for quicker action in settling a dispute between the band and CP Rail.

Band spokesman Marty Williams said Tuesday that an agreement between the reserve and the railway has been held up by the federal justice department. He said that during a 20-minute meeting this week, Faulkner promised to check into the delay.

The band wants an agreement that would force CP Rail to pay a user fee on a portion of track going through the reserve and payment for land lost because of erosion caused by diversion of the St. Mary's River.

Escape Gun Cited

VANCOUVER (CP) — A prisoner involved in an aborted escape attempt from the British Columbia Penitentiary early last year was carrying a gun when he crashed through the glass divider separating prisoners from visitors, British Columbia Supreme Court was told Monday.

Prisoner Robert Dejarlais said this proved that Steven Albert Hall did not get the gun from someone in the visiting area after the escape attempt began.

He was testifying at the trial of prison activists Betsy Wood and Heather Gay Hoon, who are both charged with prison break and public mischief.

The women were in the visiting area of the maximum-security institution when Hall and several other prisoners attempted to escape in January, 1978.

They failed and took 13 hostages, including Desjarlais.

TIMBERMEN WANT MacNEIL AS PLAYING COACH

Shamrocks Bidding For Alexander

KEVIN ALEXANDER
. . . would rather stay here

RON MacNEIL
. . . sought as coach

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

Kevin Alexander a Shamrock this year?

It's close to what would be a big addition to Victoria's Western Lacrosse Association club.

On the other hand, the joy for the Shamrocks could be tempered by the possible loss of veteran Ron MacNeil.

Alexander, who set all sorts of scoring records here as a member of the junior McDonalds of the Western Canada Major Junior League a few years ago and has been a member of the Nanaimo Timbermen of the WLA for the past two seasons after being their first-round draft pick in 1977, has told the Timbermen he isn't coming back for another season.

It's official from Nanaimo's viewpoint although Alexander said he promised to talk to the Timbermen one more time.

General manager Earl Nicholson of the Timbermen advised Shamrock president Fred Wooster of Alexander's wish this week, Leon Hall, general manager of the Shamrocks reported, and gave Shamrocks permission to talk to Alexander and also to Bob Cool.

Alexander said he told the Timbermen it was his desire to stay in Victoria, that he was tired of making the long trip up-island, but that he wouldn't sever any ties until after the WLA awards presentations in New Westminster Friday night.

Cool is also a former member of McDonalds who played for the Timbermen the last part of the 1977 season and all of last year. Cool previously indicated he would not be returning to Nanaimo and was prepared to sit out a season.

However, the Timbermen, in return for giving the Irish the right to talk to Alexander and Cool, have asked permission to approach MacNeil and offer him the position of playing coach. The Shamrocks have agreed.

The Nanaimo coaching position became open with the resignation of Ken Alexander, Kevin's brother, who has taken over as coach of Esquimalt Legion (nee McDonalds).

MacNeil last year was the Shamrocks' outstanding player and is one of three nominees for the Victoria area male athlete of the year award at the annual Sports Celebrity Dinner at the Empress Hotel, March 12.

He won the CP Air-Labatts three-star selection award in the WLA last year and finished third in the scoring race with 67 goals and 66 assists for 133 points.

Alexander had 85 goals and 50 assists for 135 points with the Timbermen to finish second to clubmate Brian Evans in scoring. Evans had 146 points.

Alexander tied with MacNeil for the most goals in one game, seven; scored the most goals in consecutive games, 24; tied with Wayne Goss for the most game-winning goals, 4; had the most hat tricks, 17; and the most man-short-goals, 14.

MacNeil had the most points in one game, 13, the most power-play goals, 18; shared most goals in one game, seven, with Alexander, and shared most first goals of the game, three, with Jim Lynch of Nanaimo and team-mate Charn Dhillon.

Cool finished seventh in scoring with 39 goals and 73 assists for 112 points.

Alexander and Cool were line-mates when McDonalds won the Canadian Junior lacrosse championship and the Minto Cup in 1976.

Hall stressed that "Nanaimo does not want to keep Alexander and Cool out of lacrosse, but rather feel they belong in the game and are prepared to work out some arrangement with that in mind."

The Timbermen are also interested in Doug Angrove of Legion who comes up in the junior draft on Friday.

Hall said that Nicholson indicated the Timbermen plan to make Angrove their first choice. Hall says Angrove doesn't want to go to Nanaimo either and that the Shamrocks are prepared to make a deal for him as well.

Angrove has been a regular junior pickup for the Shamrocks the past two years and played regularly with the club in the WHA playoffs and the Mann Cup finals last year.

Alexander, meanwhile, says he has taken over his father's business in town while brother Ken is operating the family sporting goods store on Sooke Road.

The father, Ken Alexander Sr., an ardent lacrosse fan, has retired because of ill health.

It is understood that he would like to see his son playing in Victoria.

All the Alexanders, including Kevin, have been members of the Shamrocks at one time or another.

Ken played with the Irish from 1965-1973 before turning pro with Syracuse of the defunct National Lacrosse League. He went to Nanaimo in 1976.

Frank joined the Shamrocks in 1968, was with them until 1973 and again in 1976.

Kevin made his debut with the Rocks when he was just 11. He played six games as a 15-year old and then was a pickup player several times when he was 16 and 17 before starring with McDonalds.

MacNeil has been with the Shamrocks since coming west from Brantford of the Ontario Lacrosse Association in 1974.

PIERCE ADVANCES TO CURLING FINAL

CRANBROOK (CP) — Glen Pierce of Vancouver won his first British Columbia men's curling championship Tuesday with an 8-4 win in the third game of a best-of-three series over Dave Simpson of Vernon.

Pierce opened the series Monday with a 5-2 win over Simpson, but Simpson came back with an 8-7 victory in the first game Tuesday.

Pierce's rink now advances to the Canadian championships in Ottawa, March 4-10.

In the third game, Pierce jumped ahead with two in the first end and stayed there. He picked up one in the second and third, two in the fifth and one in the seventh and ninth ends.

The second game was tied 7-7 after nine ends. Simpson had the hammer in the 10th end but didn't need it as Pierce wrecked on a guard.

Islanders Blast Rockies; Canucks Rally, Tie Blues

By The Canadian Press

It was the first day of the rest of the season for New York Islanders, Colorado Rockies, St. Louis Blues and Vancouver Canucks.

The National Hockey League's all-star break was over and it was back to the chase for points in the standings and other such matters.

"I just sat down with myself and said, 'That series was a long time ago; now I've got to start thinking about the 28 games we have left,' " said Islanders defenceman Denis Potvin, who had played for the all-stars with three of his team-mates in the recent Challenge Cup loss to the Soviet national team.

He was back with the Islanders on Tuesday night, scoring his 21st goal of the season and helping New York to a 6-1 rout of the Rockies.

In St. Louis the Canucks rallied for a 3-3 tie with the Blues.

"We (the Islanders) hadn't played a game in eight or nine days, so the first period kind of got the cobwebs out," added left winger Clark Gillies, the all-stars' most valuable player in last week's tournament. "Tonight wasn't quite the hockey that was played in the other series."

No one expected it to be. The Islanders, with 76 points in the standings after 52 games, were playing the Rockies — who had 32 points in 53 games.

"They should spot us five goals," said Colorado coach Aldo Guidolin.

To be sure, the Islanders tried. Openly rusty from the long layoff, New York was sloppy in the first period and only a strong performance by goaltender Glenn Resch — especially during a mid-period Rockies power play — kept Colorado off the scoreboard.

"Most of the other players were flat from not playing in so long," observed Rockies defenceman Barry Beck, who distinguished himself against the Soviets. "The other guys, who had played last week, were just tired."

But it was the ones who played last week who played best Tuesday.

New York right winger Mike Bossy scored his 44th goal and set up three others, while centre Bryan Trottier had two goals and an assist on the goal by Potvin. Gillies set up Bossy's score in a three-goal Islanders second period.

Beck, meanwhile, fed John Van Boxmeer for the 25-foot power play score that ruined Resch's shutout bid at 6:30 of the third period.

At St. Louis, Ron Sedlbauer's power-play goal, his 32nd of the year, at 7:03 of the third period pulled Vancouver even.

With the tie, the second-place Canucks now hold a 4-1-2 advantage over St. Louis this season.

Sedlbauer backhanded a rebound behind Ed Staniowski after the Blues' goaltender had stopped a 30-foot shot by Lars Lindgren.

Curt Bennett of the Blues and Vancouver's Thomas Gradin traded first-period goals before the Blues went ahead 3-1 on power-play goals by Bernie Federko in the first and Jack Brownschidle early in the second.

Curt Fraser scored for Vancouver five minutes into the second period to pull the Canucks to within one goal.

BIG VANCOUVER LINEBACKER FIRST CHOICE IN CFL DRAFT

TORONTO (CP) — Kevin Powell, a six-foot-four, 260-pound offensive tackle from Utah State, was the No. 1 selection today in the Canadian Football League college draft.

Toronto Argonauts, who gained the first pick by virtue of the worst record in the CFL last season, 4-12, took the towering Vancouver native to open the 1979 draft of Canadian-born college players.

Saskatchewan Roughriders, selecting in the No. 2 spot, took defensive back Al Chorney from the British Columbia Thunderbirds.

Mark Houghton, a running back with University of California at Los Angeles, was taken next by British Columbia Lions. Hamilton Tiger-Cats, pegged to pick fourth, traded that selection to Saskatchewan, which went with Gerry Hornett, an offensive tackle from Simon Fraser Unversity at Burnaby.

Hornett's clubmate, running back Rick House, was selected next by Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Ottawa Rough Riders, with the sixth pick, went for Carmen Cartieri, a linebacker at Montana. Calgary Stampeders, who had the next two selections, the second as a result of a trade last year with Montreal Alouettes, went first for defensive back Darrell Moir of Calgary and then took Daryl Burko, a linebacker from Saskatchewan.

The Grey Cup champion Edmonton Eskimos, selecting last in the first round, went for linebacker Dan Brown of Calgary.

Hockey Favorites Topple At Windy Brandon Games

BRANDON, Man. (CP) — Someone must have left the door open at the arena in wind-swept Brandon Tuesday because a couple of the favorites in the Canada Winter Games hockey tournament were blown out of the rink.

Games organizers were so impressed with the strength of the Ontario and Quebec entries that they denied Bramalea Blues and Gatineau Ambassadeurs the privilege granted to other teams of bolstering their lineups with outside players.

But the way things looked Tuesday, no reinforcements this side of the Soviet Union could have helped the Blues, who lost 12-4 to Alberta, or the Ambassadeurs, who took a 13-2 beating from British Columbia.

The wind was a dominant factor in the only two final events completed on the first full day of Games activity — the men's and women's 500-metre speedskating. And it forced postponement until today of the women's 1,500 metres, which was to have been contested after the sprints.

Sylvie Daigle, a 105-pound elf from Sherbrooke, Que., tamed the elements in the women's 500 as she covered the course in 47.12 seconds. The 16-year-old 1978 Canadian junior champion was more than a second faster than the runner-up, Nancy White of Montague, P.E.I. Shawna Hicks of Winnipeg was third.

Farley Kellett, a student at the Saskatoon School for the Deaf who has to see the smoke from the starter's pistol to know when it's time to go, won the men's sprint in 43.10.

The margin of victory was much closer than in the women's race, with five competitors finishing within less than a second of the winning time. Joe Sallay of Calgary was second in 43.21 and bronze medallist Peter Jamieson of Waterloo, Ont., was clocked in 43.28.

Pierrette Boulanger of Calgary was the leader at the halfway point of the women's slalom, opening event of the Alpine skiing program at Agassiz, 140 kilometres northeast of Brandon.

The West was firmly in command of the preliminary round of hockey competition as Alberta and Saskatchewan led their group with 2-0 records and B.C. won both its starts in the other half of the draw. The top two teams in each division qualify to play for the medals.

B.C. simply overwhelmed the Ambassadeurs, outshooting them 62-32 and piling up a 9-0 lead before the Quebecers got on the board late in the second period. The pattern was similar in a 5-1 victory over Manitoba, except that the Prairie club only averted a shutout with barely three minutes left to play.

The West Coast province had a good day in other team sports. Its men's and women's volleyball entries had 2-0 records and its badminton entry had a 3-0 mark, sharing the lead with Quebec and Ontario.

MARATHON BATTLE

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Eventually, finally, ultimately, it was Bartlesville Sooner prevailing over crosstown rival Bartlesville College in one of the longest high school basketball games in state history Tuesday night.

The score, after seven three-minute overtimes, was Sooner 94, College 93.

Don Keleher, who rode the bench for two hours of the three-hour contest, hit a 21-foot jump shot with three seconds left in the seventh overtime to give Sooner the win.

Regulation ended with the teams tied at 58. Thereafter, the score was tied at 66, 68, 72, 78, 82 and 86 before Keleher scored the winner.

Titans Tripped

Dan Hammick scored a try, converted it and booted a penalty goal to supply all the points for Claremont Spartans in a 9-6 upset victory over Victoria Titans in a Greater Victoria High School Rugby League game Tuesday.

Mark Wyatt accounted for the Titan points with a drop goal and a penalty goal.

It was the first win in three starts for Spartans and the first loss in four for the defending British Columbia champions.

In the only other match, Spectrum also came up with its first win, an 18-11 decision over Mt. Douglas Mountainmen.

Breakers Surge

SEATTLE (CP) — Seattle Breakers spotted Edmonton Oil Kings 2-1 in the first period, but overwhelmed the visitors 8-2 in the only Western Hockey League game Tuesday night.

The Breakers outshot Edmonton 52-12 in the final two periods after falling behind 2-1 in the final two minutes of the first period.

Six of the Seattle goals were scored in the second period.

Tim Hunter opened the second period with the tying goal at 2:08. Nine seconds later, Ron Kolman notched the winner.

Len Dies got a second-period goal to go with his tally in the first. Other Seattle goals were scored by Shane Clarke, Joe Ward, Tom Marsh and Brian Graves.

Larry McCurrager and Terry Davis scored for Edmonton.

Edmonton goaltender Al Wiebe faced 66 shots while Ken Hodge was not really tested in the Breakers nets, stopping 22.

Edmonton, which travels to Victoria to face the Cougars tonight at 8 in Memorial Arena, had five of seven minor penalties.

Borg Bumped

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Bruce Manson, the world's 112th-ranked tennis player, scored a stunning 6-7, 7-5, 6-1 victory Tuesday over Bjorn Borg of Sweden in a first-round match of the $250,000 Tennis Games at Mission Hills Country Club.

A former University of Southern California star who turned professional in 1977, Manson used accurate groundstrokes to tire, then beat Borg, the second-rated player in the world and the tournament's second seed behind Jimmy Connors.

In other first-round matches, Connors beat Czechoslovakia's Vladmir Zednik 6-2, 7-5; third-seeded John McEnroe downed Tom Gullikson 6-4, 6-3, and Alvaro Fillol of Chile defeated Adriano Panatta of Italy 7-6, 6-2.

Borg was coming off an impressive 6-3, 6-2 victory over Connors in Sunday's final of the Grand Slam tournament in Boca West, Fla. But the Swede, a three-time Wimbledon champion, had flight delay problems in his trip west and was sluggish in his loss to Manson.

Flora Tied for Lead

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Carole Trueman of Vancouver defeated a former British Columbia and Canadian champion to force a three-way tie for first in the B.C. senior women's curling championship Tuesday.

Trueman edged Flora Martin of Victoria 5-4 after the rinks were tied 4-4 going into the 10th end.

Martin, winner of the B.C. and Canadian championships in 1974 and 1975, was sitting two when Trueman played a double-and-hit and stayed for the winning point.

Trueman, Martin and Abbie Bridgeman each have three wins and one loss in the round-robin tournament.

Tied for fourth are Kay Gable of Prince Rupert and Gudren Thompson of Cranbrook, with 2-2 records.

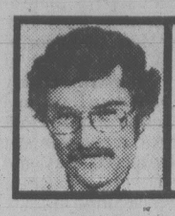

In other games Tuesday, Trueman stopped Connie Barker of North Vancouver 7-5, Martin beat Thompson 12-5, and Bridgman lost to Gable 8-5, before coming back to down Dorothy Armstrong of Fort Nelson 14-5.

Flo Makepeace of New Westminster lost an 8-7 decision to Armstrong, then bowed 13-6 to Connie Barker of North Vancouver. Thompson defeated Gable 10-

Charlotte Logging Ban Testing Fish Act Teeth

OUTDOORS
stewart lang

Just what did they expect?

Forests Minister Tom Waterland and the International Woodworkers of America have been beating their chests in dismay recently over the decision by Federal Fisheries to halt a 50-acre logging operation in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

The union stand is a little easier to justify — a few jobs are at stake.

But it's interesting to note that the B.C. government, which has fought the far-sighted provisions of the federal Fisheries Act (Bill C-38) right from the start, appears to be carrying on the battle.

One can't help but think the motivation stems strictly from jurisdictional jealousy.

Despite all the rhetoric over multiple use, the practice of mining timber in this province has gone on far too long. Sooner or later, more than lip service will have to be paid to other users of the publicly-owned forest land.

A lack of specific protective clauses for either wildlife or fish habitat in the hastily-conceived provincial Forest Act — which, in the final analysis, takes only timber extraction into account — made this confrontation inevitable.

Photographs and reports from other agencies coming out of the Queen Charlotte Islands show quite plainly no consideration was really given in the past to fisheries values — which are considerable.

Little wonder, then, federal fisheries has finally decided to take a stand.

Dave Orton, writing in the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union paper The Fisherman, had this to say over the South Moresby Wilderness Proposal in the Charlottes:

"The Charlottes generally are in an area characterized by heavy rainfall, strong winds and earthquake activity.

"Southern Moresby is mountainous, as is much of the west of the islands. Massive clear-cutting, like on Talunkwan Island, with decay of roots within two to seven years after harvesting, can lead to serious erosion with subsequent flushing and siltation of any fishing streams. Blow-downs are a naturally-recurring problem; clear-cut openings intensify this. Earth tremors can easily trigger slope slides, given the right set of conditions."

Soil conditions on some of the logged slopes, in fact, have led to slides, even without tremors.

Jim Hart, the federal fisheries official who ordered the logging ban, said the move was necessary because timber harvesting has already damaged some salmon streams in the area and he was concerned further logging on the steep hillsides would lead to additional erosion and landslides.

Hart obviously felt the consultation process between government agencies and industry wasn't providing sufficient protection for the fisheries resource — or he wouldn't have taken such a radical step.

The land in question isn't within any of the three major Tree Farm Licences in the area but any action on this comparitively miniscule piece of real estate could have major ramifications when Rayonier Canada Ltd. begins to take advantage of its "right" to log the 160,000-acre wilderness area on Southern Moresby.

Waterland and the company foresters, in effect, are asking us to trust their better judgement.

Why should we?

If past examples in the Charlottes, or even right here on Vancouver Island, are any indication, such trust would be misplaced.

NIBBLES: On the same topic . . . British Columbia Supreme Court has postponed an injunction application against Waterland ordering him not to renew Rayonier's TFL 24 in the Charlottes before a public hearing is held on the issue . . . It has been adjourned until 10 a.m. Feb. 21 in Vancouver . . . Waterland recently announced he would renew the TFL for 25 years without a public hearing although he is on record as stating nothing in the Forest Act "precludes us from having public hearings if we feel it is necessary."

Steelheaders trying their luck in the Goldstream should watch for tagged fish and return them unharmed . . . UVic student Andy Witt, working on his masters degree, is involved in a radio-telemetry study of steelhead involving the Salmonid Enhancement Program, the fish and wildlife branch, UVic and the Rod Haig-Brown Fly Fishers Club . . . Radio transmitters have been placed in the stomachs of seven steelhead in order to determine what environmental factors trigger their migration movements, habitat preferences and spawning habits . . . While it isn't mandatory, anglers can do their bit in this important study by releasing all tagged fish.

Braves Kill Bay Streak

Belmont Braves scored the final 10 points in the game to chop off a lengthy streak Tuesday, beating Oak Bay Bays 58-48 in Greater Victoria High School Boys' Basketball League play.

It was the first league loss for Bays since 1974.

Alan Cole set the pace for Belmont, which led 32-28 at half time, with 19 points while Vince Tuele, Steve Salt and Tom Raine each chipped in 12. Wayne Andrews was the top gun for Bays with 28 points.

Oak Bay battled back to tie the score 48-48 in the fourth quarter before being shut out the rest of the game.

In other games, Parkland Panthers crushed Claremont Spartans 90-20, Mt. Douglas Rams topped Victoria Totems 67-55, Spectrum defeated Esquimalt Dockers 61-54 and Dunsmuir Demons dropped Reynolds Roadrunners, 93-71.

Greg Wiltjer and Quinn Groenhyde set the pace for Panthers, who led 44-6 at half time, with 26 points each.

Rams were sparked by a 15-point effort from Brian Alexander and Wayne Russell topped Totems with 17.

Ron Crabbe sank 26 points to lead the Spectrum victory while Dean St. Pierre and Carson each supplied the same total for Demons.

Meanwhile, the Greater Victoria High School Girls' League wrapped up its regular season with Spectrum beating Esquimalt 50-30, Parkland topping Claremont 44-34 and Reynolds tripping Dunsmuir, 55-44.

Mt. Douglas finished first with a 9-0 record and was followed by Oak Bay 8-1 and Spectrum 7-2. The three schools join four other class "AA" league teams — Victoria (5-4), Reynolds (4-5), Claremont (2-7) and Esquimalt (2-7) — for the South Island championship this weekend. Play opens Thursday at Mt. Douglas and continues Friday at Esquimalt and Saturday at Oak Bay.

Stelly's, Parkland and Dunsmuir travel to Southgate near Campbell River this weekend to compete in the Island "A" tourney.

ENGLAND WRAPS UP CRICKET TRIUMPH

SYDNEY (Reuter) — England off-spinner Geoff Miller took five wickets to help his side to a crushing nine-wicket win today over Australia one hour after lunch on the fourth day of the sixth and final cricket test.

Miller's five for 44 from 27.1 overs were his best test bowling figures, dismissing Australia for a meagre 143 in its second innings and leaving England the formality of scoring only 34 runs to win the match.

England captain Mike Brearley fittingly hit the winning run when he pulled Australian off-spinner Bruce Yardley through midwicket for four.

The nine-wicket decision gave England a 5-1 victory in the six-test series.

JBAA Places 12 Players On Crimson Tide Squad

James Bay Athletic Association has again dominated selections to the Vancouver Island Rugby Union representative Crimson Tide side for the remaining McKechnie Cup matches.

A total of 12 players from the provincial champion side has been picked to play for the Tide, which defeated Vancouver in the opening round of the four-team, round-robin McKechnie competition.

Crimson Tide faces University of British Columbia Thunderbirds March 3 in Vancouver and finishes up by visiting Fraser Valley, April 1.

Pact Extended For Red Miller

Miller, who came to Denver for the 1977 season, had completed two of the three years in his original pact.

Jury Rejects Bubba's Suit

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A jury rejected Bubba Smith's $2.5-million suit against the National Football League Tuesday, ruling Smith was injured on the football field — not by a metal yardage marker.

After two hours of deliberation following a six-day trial, the four-man, two-woman federal court jury found no negligence on the part of the NFL or two game officials.

Smith said the officials failed to remove a sideline marker and that he ran into it during a 1972 pre-season game at Tampa. He said he suffered a knee injury that diminished his playing career.

"I can't believe this," Smith said of the verdict. "I came down here with the truth." Smith said he did not collide with any players on the field.

During closing arguments earlier in the day, one of Smith's lawyers told the jury that the NFL had not produced a single eyewitness who disputed Smith's claim about the sideline marker.

NFL lawyers insisted Smith hit another player, Franco Harris, before falling out of bounds.

LIVERPOOL MOVES BACK TO TOP SPOT

LONDON (Reuter) — Liverpool went back to the top of English Soccer First Division on Tuesday with a 1-0 home win over Birmingham City.

Arsenal moved into second place with a 2-1 win on Queen's Park Rangers ground.

Liverpool won on a goal by Graeme Souness in the 37th minute.

Liverpool is one point clear of both Arsenal and Everton but has games in hand over both clubs and now appears likely to win the championship for the third time in four years.

Blizzards Are All New

TORONTO (CP) — The new owner of the local North American Soccer League franchise realize there's no time to waste.

And so within a space of less than 24 hours, Global Sports Enterprises announced a new name and home for the club, as well as the signings of both a general manager and coach for the 1979 season, which gets under way in little more than a month.

Global president Paul Morton, whose organization was confirmed as the new owner just last week, introduced Norman Sutherland as the team's GM at a Tuesday news conference and then announced that the club will be known as the Blizzard.

Then today came word that Keith Eddy, former captain of Sheffield United of the English First Division and a three-year NASL veteran, has signed to coach the team.

Morton, whose parent company — Global Communications Ltd. — plans to televise 10 of the Blizzard home games, also said the team will move to the artificial turf of Exhibition Stadium this season after playing on the natural grass at Varsity Stadium since joining the NASL in 1971.

"We have tentatively agreed to enter a 15-year lease, subject to ratification by the CNE board," Morton said.

Eddy, a 34-year-old native of Barrow-in-Furness, England, who is expected to be formally signed at a news conference Thursday, was captain of New York Cosmos in 1976. He was injured early in the 1977 season and missed last year through injuries.

Global purchased 85 per cent of the soccer club last week from a consortium known as the Toronto Croatia soccer club, which subsequently retained 7½ per cent ownership, with the remainder held by lawyer Bruce Thomas.

Interclub Event

Designed primarily for daytime curlers who rarely get invited into bonspiels by their more competitive compatriots, the annual women's Interclub Bonspiel will take place next week at area clubs with Victoria Curling Club as host.

The idea originated with Victoria Club and the first bonspiel was played in 1968 with each of the four clubs in existence at that time — Playland, Victoria, Esquimalt and Racquet Club — donating a trophy.

Since then, Juan de Fuca and Oak Bay, and this year Glen Meadows, have joined the group.

Only club rinks and curlers in their regular club positions can participate.

The four-day bonspiel opens Monday.

Opening draw for all rinks:

Pressure Groups Knocked

JIM CAMPBELL

Small pressure groups that try to dictate to elected officials were criticized Tuesday by former regional board chairman Jim Campbell of Saturna Island.

Singling out the Salt Spring Islanders who have tried to force regional director Mike Clement to have the island excluded from the three-cent-a-gallon transit tax, Campbell said 120 people out of the 4,000 living on the island should not be in a position to pre-empt Clement's job.

He described them as "small malcontent groups" and said this is not Switzerland where everything is done by referendum.

He said he does not underestimate the public.

"People choose their representatives and the vast majority is prepared to watch what they do and either dispose of them or put them back again at the time of the next election."

Campbell said Tuesday if such malcontent groups think the regional board "is going to plead with the provincial government to have the Gulf Islands excluded from the gas tax they are absolutely out of their tree."

Clement said reports that those attending a meeting at Ganges on Friday were unanimously opposed to the gas levy were wrong. He said no vote was taken and that a committee of five had been appointed to study the matter.

Clement said the meeting had considered the metropolitan system of Seattle which has a mini-bus systen serving the islands in the area.

Clement said he had Islands Trust people co-chairing Friday's meeting because of the overlapping of responsibility. He said the Islands Trust is responsible for planning transportation while the regional board is responsible for the operation of transit.

Van Threw Teenager Then Crushed Her, Inquest Told

A coroner's jury was told Tuesday a van involved in the death Jan. 28 of a young woman spun out of control after being hit by another car.

Victoria police constable Ross Swanton at the inquest into the death of Janice Campbell, 18, a passenger in the van, said the girl was thrown out of the van and crushed against a light standard near Cook and Johnson.

"It appeared that the van spun and three people were ejected from the rear of the van, and the van backed into the pole, crushing the deceased, and spinning off that, came to rest," Swanton told the inquest.

"It appeared that neither party saw each other . . . and made no attempt to stop."

Swanson said the driver of the van was Ronald Cheeke, 17.

The van had a motor vehicle rejection sticker on the windshield, he said, its horn did not work and the vehicle had no front bumper.

Cheeke was later given a notice to appear in court on a charge of dangerous driving, Swanton said, and his licence was also suspended.

Lawyer Ken Walton, acting for Cheeke, objected to Swanton's evidence.

"I don't think it's relevant. Just because police have charged a person does not mean he's guilty," he said.

Pathologist Dr. Bruce Hay testified that Campbell died from extensive traumatic chest and abdominal injuries.

The inquest will resume on Feb.27.

Child Killed

MARIA, Que. (CP) — Seven-year-old Stephane Normandeau was killed Tuesday when he was crushed under the rear wheels of his school bus in front of his home in this Gaspe community.

School Maintenance Fears

CUT-OFF RESIDENTS from the west end of Hood Canal Floating Bridge check out what was left of the structure Tuesday after winds gusting to 160 km/h snapped and sank part of the 1.3-mile bridge linking Washington State's Kitsap and Olympic peninsulas, longest bridge of its kind in North America.

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Greater Victoria School District administrators are trying to lay the blame for maintenance problems on the employees and a serious confrontation could result, a Canadian Union of Public Employees spokesman warned Tuesday.

Tom Cooper, president of CUPE Local 382, which represents school board outside workers, said in an interview the employees are hoping to sort out the problem through communication with the school trustees and management people.

"But if management doesn't take a more reasonable attitude I fear for the future."

The issue prompting Cooper's attack is an on-going one stemming from the school board's decision in September, 1977, to cut 57 maintenance and clerical positions between January and June, 1978.

As a result about 40 employees were laid off. They were members of Local 382 and 947, which represents the inside workers.

Because of the drop in employees, the district is contracting out some of the maintenance work, something which irks the union members who feel they could be doing the job better and for less money.

The issue heated up again recently when the Confederation of Victoria Parents Associations (CVPA) charged that there were a number of serious maintenance problems in the schools.

School superintendent Allan Stables countered with a report saying that maintenance levels decreased 20 per cent last year primarily due to cost-cutting measures.

He said a significant problem was created when, as well as cutting staff, the district cut funds for relief workers.

He said of seven carpenters on staff, on average two are away each day throughout the year due to illness and holidays.

He denied a charge by a parent group that the district had no control over the quality of work that is contracted out.

Cooper, a custodian at George Jay elementary school, said Stables' statement was wrong in parts and misleading in others.

For one thing, he said, there are only five carpenters on staff, not seven and the district has never hired relief people to cover for maintenance employees off on holidays or illness.

Doug Grant, one of the five carpenters, said during the same interview that using Stables' figures each of the five carpenters, aside from annual holidays and statutory days off, would have had to have been absent from the job 38 days last year.

In fact, he said, they averaged 10 days off and this included two workers who were each off for 40-day stretches.

"So his figures are absolutely false," Grant said.

Cooper said the reason the district can't keep up to the maintenance problems is because of the decision in 1977 to lay people off.

"They were warned that it would happen and now they are trying to push it off on us," he said.

"And that's what makes us mad."

Both Cooper and Grant said there is no way that, having reduced their maintenance staff by almost 50 per cent — there are five carpenters compared with nine before the layoffs — that maintenance in the school district can only be down 20 per cent as Stables claims.

Nor is there any way that the maintenance work that is being contracted out is being done any cheaper or more efficiently than if the school board employees had done it.

They give some examples:

— A chain-link fence was put up recently at Willows school by a private contractor but no gate was put in to allow tractors to come in and cut the grass.

— Last fall vandals broke into George Jay elementary and damaged the public address system. A sub-contractor was called in, fixed some broken wires and then had to go to the district staff for replacement of a damaged microphone.

— Last year when work was being done on two annexes for Victoria West, the district's own electricians were used for some of the work, mostly the underground conduit work, but the overhead wiring job was contracted out.

The employees say these are just some of the examples of how work is being done less effectively because it is being taken out of the hands of those who know the schools, it is being done at a higher cost than if district workers had done it, and outside workers are being brought in unnecessarily.

And the contracting-out work is increasing, the union says.

The district's 1979 provisional budget calls for $20,305 to be spent on such services, compared with the estimated $10,000 set aside in the 1978 provisional budget and the $16,618 actually spent.

Cooper said the reason the district has decided to lay people off and contract out work is that it is easier to cancel a contract than fire an employee. Also, he said, the district wants to reduce the number of union members and so cut back on CUPE's effectiveness.

Hang Ten

Shoes to fit your life (not just your feet)

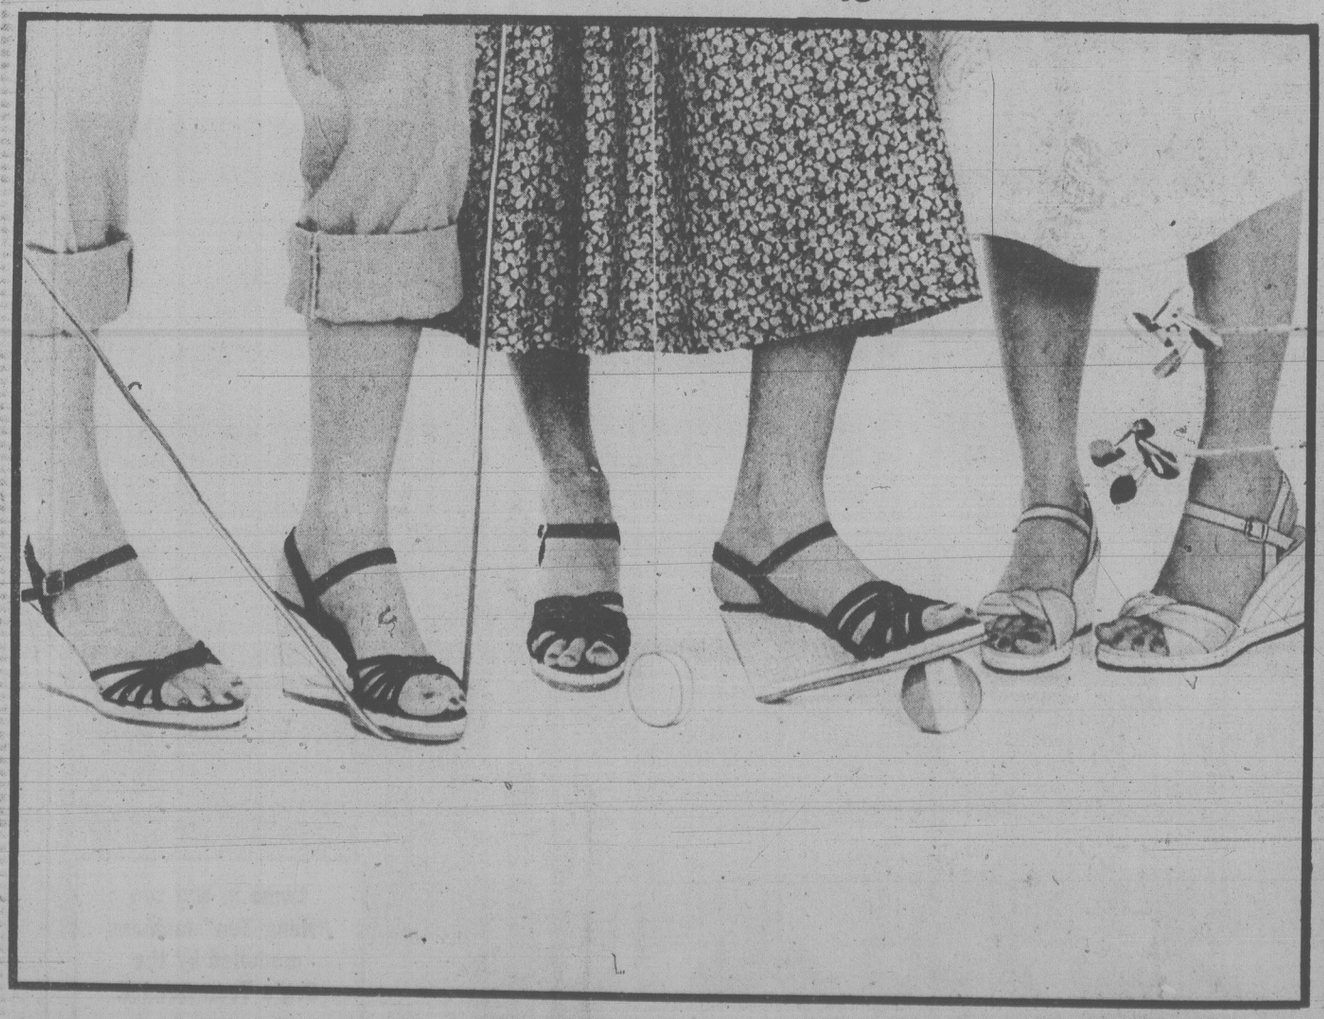

The California surfing cult has been the inspiration for some pretty great stuff. Beach Boys music. Winter tans. Freckles. But the fashion that found a toe-hold on the beaches of California has made its way north, to the tennis courts and ski slopes of beautiful B.C. And the shoes that once kept rhythm with the surf are dancing to the city beat of Jeunesse.

Hang Ten shoes. More than comfort. More than fashion. They're fun, reflecting that young-at-heart-beat with every step. And the styles will knock you back on your heels. Here are just four of the Hang Ten styles we're so excited about. But look for the Hang Ten footprint, your assurance of the original Hang Ten style.

Be sure to see the new Hang Ten active sport group in Jeunesse, in the Hang Ten Shop.

CHAOS IN CANADA

dntist who lead the Canadian government project that produced Wolverine.

But Wolverine didn't like it in Canada so he quit to work in the United States with other mutants, travelling afar to fight evil "in the savage land" — somewhere in the far Pacific.

But nobody quits on the prime minister, especially when all that government money has been spent on the project.

Dr. Hudson himself is a mutant and in the story he assumes roles of Vindicator in his skin-tight space garb as well as Major Maple Leaf.

"They're dangerous in a flight," Dr. Hudson tells the prime minister about the X-men. "They're based near New York City and there are hints of a possible connection to the U.S. government."

But the indignant prime minister retorts:

"I don't care if they have definite connections with the Boy Scouts. They have weapon X — I want him back."

A tape is slipped into a computer to summon Alpha Flight, the Canadian supermutants, from their civilian jobs.

Northstar is Jean-Paul Beaubier, Olympic and professional skiing champion on a promotional tour in Jasper National Park.

Dr. Michael Twoyoungmen, staff doctor at the Sarcee Reserve Hospital outside Calgary, is Shaman of Alpha Flight.

Then there is Snow-bird who is Cpl. Anne McKenzie of the RCMP, assigned to records in Yellowknife, Northwest Territories.

The most powerful Canadian super hero is Sasquatch — a hulking civilian named Dr. Walter Langnowski, former all-pro linebacker turned professor of biophysics at McGill University, Montreal.

And finally there is Jean-Marie Beaubier, a teacher in Laval, Que., who is Aurora.

While Wolverine and his buddies are returning home from Tokyo after the "savage land" battle, Alpha Flight changes the world's weather pattern, creating a giant storm that forces the X-men's jetliner to land in Calgary, the only clear spot.

At Calgary airport, Sasquatch grabs the airliner singlehanded and hurls it through a hangar but the X-men already have escaped.

"Sasquatch, you incredible lummox — I told you to stop that plane, not smash it," Vindicator says while buzzing the airport in his space dress.

"Sorry about that, Vindicator," says Sasquatch. "I guess I still don't know my own strength."

As well as the references to the prime minister, there are also digs at the RCMP in the comic book.

During one conversation, Wolverine says about Alpha Flight: "They ain't villains . . . they're what I used to be — Canadian government agents."

Jim MacDonald, a spokesman for the prime minister's office, said Trudeau had not yet seen the strip.

"Public figures end up in comic strips all the time, and we don't attach any importance to it," he said.

MacDonald said he had not heard who wins the battle, but "I'm waiting with bated breath to find out."

More Strike Time Lost

OTTAWA (CP) — Time lost due to strikes and lockouts in 1978 was radically up from time lost in 1977, the federal labor department said Tuesday.

Final figures for the year have not yet been compiled, but for the first 11 months of 1978 there was a loss of 7,007,870 man-days, compared to a loss of 2,954,750 man-days in the first 11 months of 1977.

In November, 1978, there were 595,620 man-days lost because of 43,780 workers involved in 182 stoppages.

Focus on Hang Ten

The California look for your sporting life.

The warm weather is coming (trust us). And you know what that means. Get out and get moving time. Time to get into the sportswear that moves with you, Hang Ten.

This is the style that was born in the California sunshine and took its first steps on the beaches there. And the little footprints that identify the original Hang Ten style have left their mark all over North America. On the tennis courts and the bike trails. On the baseball diamonds and jogging tracks.

Because Hang Ten is more than just a way of dressing. It's a way of life. The sportswear is made to fit, to move with you (not against you) when you play your favourite games.

Flower Count Sprouting

Victoria's annual flower count started at 9 a.m. today when a woman phoned to report 720 snowdrops and 197 crocuses growing in her backyard.

This was followed by a man reporting a single yellow pansy.

Phone number for the count is 381-5315.

Teams organized by Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce will count flowers at Beacon Hill Park, Butchart Gardens, Vantreight's farm, University of Victoria and Government House before the counting ends on Feb. 20.

See also page 32.

Victorians had counted 35,694 flowers growing outdoors during the first two hours of the annual tabulation today. Snowdrops and crocuses were the most popular varieties followed by heather, azaleas and wallflowers.

"If we took a count at Beacon Hill Park today it might only take seven minutes," campaign chairman Carmela Costigan said.

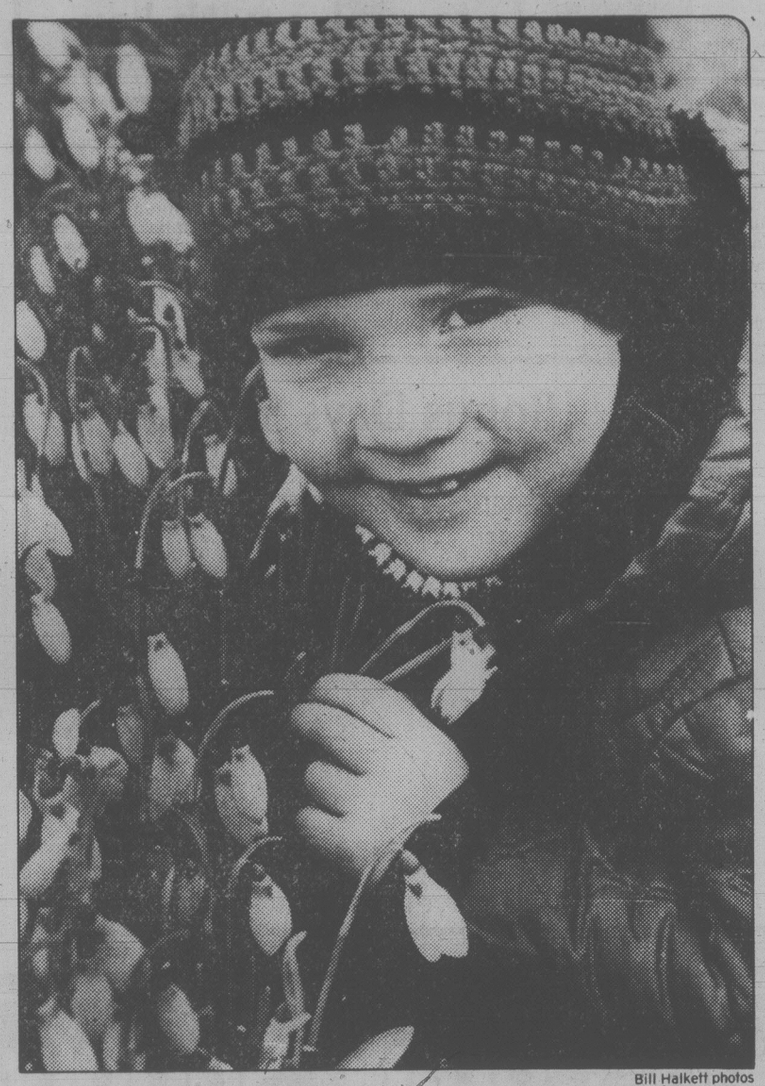

"The flowers are a little scarce at the moment but there should be a lot more in a few days."

The target for the count is one million flowers.

Mrs. Costigan was interviewed today by CBC's national Good Morning show and she said it is clear there are legions of skeptics in Eastern Canada.

"They just can't believe we have flowers blooming at this time of year. They think this is some sort of tongue-in-cheek promotion and I have to stress that we are serious about this.

"We want all of Canada to know they can smell the flowers and play golf all year around in Victoria."

Democracy's Bills Called Grotesque

Democracy doesn't come cheap, even at the municipal government level, Saanich aldermen were told Tuesday.

Mayor Mel Couvelier said he wants his council colleagues to appreciate the fact the cost of reaching the electorate is becoming grotesque.

One example cited by the mayor was the cost of notifying residents of tonight's public hearing on a proposal to double the minimum lot size for subdivision of rural property.

Couvelier told the policy and management committee the total costs involved in the notification exercise, including postage, labor and newspaper advertising, came to $4,500.

As 1,500 residents are potentially affected by the rezoning, that works out to $3 per person, he noted.

Couvelier stressed he is not arguing against the policy of informing the electorate as fully as possible, but merely trying to ensure that elected officials and citizens appreciate the cost of democracy.

He made his comments during debate on a proposed overhaul of council's procedural bylaw, particularly as it applies to public hearings on rezoning applications.

One suggestion from Ald. John Mika was to broaden the policy of routinely notifying all residents living within 300 feet of property proposed for rezoning. Mika said he would like to see the radius doubled to 600 feet.

But municipal clerk Bob Sharp was clearly unenthusiastic about the idea, claiming that in doubling the radius council would also be doubling the clerical costs.

Sharp said he wondered whether the wider notification was really needed.

"Are you just inviting irrelevant comments?"

He said the municipal administration process is already complicated by numerous procedures and deadlines.

Mika said a case could be argued for different radii in different parts of the municipality. A 300-foot policy in a fairly densely populated urban area produces a vastly different result from applying that arbitrary rule in a more sparsely settled rural or semi-rural environment.

In any case, Mika said, a policy of full and open communication with residents would be an investment for Saanich, irrespective of costs and other considerations.

"I believe we can get value out of community involvement. Council business is speeded up if there is trust between council and the community," he added.

TRUSTEES DRAW OAK BAY FIRE

Budget 'Grossly Irresponsible'

Ald. Peter Bunn of Oak Bay today labelled "grossly irresponsible" a $45 million operating budget approved Tuesday by the Greater Victoria School Board.

Bunn, a 16-year school board veteran and a former chairman, said he had been authorized by Mayor Brian Smith to denounce the budget. Oak Bay will request a meeting with trustees to discuss the impact on property taxes of budget increases, including the addition of 11 employees.

"The new members of the board are paying their election debt to the teachers union," Bunn charged.

He said he will recommend that council issue a formal complaint to Education Minister Pat McGeer and the finance ministry.

The operating budget is 6.8 per cent higher than last year's $42 million final budget.

Increases to the 1979 provisional budget drawn up in November by the former board total less than $500,000, but are only the tip of the iceberg, Bunn said.

"The total impact won't be felt on the tax notice going around in the next few months. The impact will be felt in a year's time," he predicted.

He said although staff additions will cost about $110,000 to implement, they will end up costing $250,000 by 1980.

During a four-hour session Tuesday night the board wrapped up a week of operating budget debate.

Trustees will meet today at 5:30 to complete the budget, which will be presented to McGeer just ahead of the Thursday deadline.

Board chairman Carol Pickup said today the district is eligible for a $300,000 education ministry incentives grant.

She said this is the third straight year the board has managed one of the lowest budget increases in the province.

The greatest increase in the provisional budget, an arbitrated award to teachers and an as yet unsettled contract with the Canadian Union of Pubic Employees, are beyond board control, she said.

The board trimmed $119,000 from district supplies.

General supplies were reduced by $50,000. Other cuts were made in the physical education, home economics, industrial education, science and library supplies budgets.

The number of teaching positions eliminated due to declining enrolment will drop from 58 to 47 this year, lowering the pupil-teacher ratio to 18.5 from 18.8.

Six of the new teaching positions will be at the elementary level, administration's top priority.

Two remedial specialists will be hired to work with junior high students and S.J. Willis will get a careers program teacher.

The board also created positions for a co-ordinator of counsellors and a psychometrics specialist.

Meanwhile, Saanich council's finance committee recommended Tuesday that council representatives meet with both Greater Victoria and Saanich school trustees to impress on them the need for budget restraint this year, following the ceiling of five per cent budget increases imposed on municipalities.

B.C. Tel to Spend $18.9 Million Here

B.C. Tel will spend $18.9 million in the Victoria area this year for cables and the continuing conversion to electronic switching equipment.

George Holmes, division customer service manager, said Victoria's Albion (477) exchange will be converted to an electronic system as will those whose phone numbers begin with 592 and 598.

A phone mart store will be opened in Victoria before year's end, allowing customers to come in and pick out the model and color of their choice.

In all, $42.2 million will be spent on Vancouver Island this year in the conversion program.

About $12.3 million will be used in the Nanaimo, Port Alberni and Duncan area and another $11 million at Campbell River, Courtenay and Port Hardy.

B.C. Tel will spend $2 million to improve its microwave radio system for Vancouver Island.

During the year, exchanges numbered 478, 658 and 652 will have automatic number identification equipment installed so customers will no longer have to give their number to an operator when dialing long distance calls.

The company will spend $8.3 million on conduits and cables in the Victoria region.

The total includes $2.7 million for 11 underground projects in the Victoria exchange, $274,000 for underground cable to the Keating office for housing developments at Saanichton and Brentwood Bay, $700,000 for three miles of underground cable for residential expansion in Sidney and $440,000 for expansion in Oak Bay.

Former Reeve Dies

George Murdoch, a former Oak Bay reeve and layman meteorologist, died Monday afternoon at his 2240 Beach Drive home. He was 85.

Born in Victoria and operator for many years of a music and appliance firm, he took an active part in community affairs. He was reeve from 1959 to 1963 after serving 13 years as a councillor.

He is survived by his widow Victoria Emily and two sons, George of Quadra Island and Alex of Prince Rupert. There are five grandchildren.

Island Price 'Outrageous'

Former Capital Regional District board chairman Jim Campbell said today provincial government money should not be used to buy Sidney Island, which owner Jack Todd has put on the market for $3.7 million.

The region's finance and personnel committee agreed with Campbell and will recommend the board not support the Sidney Island Committee's drive to buy the island with public funds.

"It's an outrageous price that's being asked," Campbell said. "It's a totally inflated notion of what it's worth. It (the island) has been appraised on the assumption that all of the island could be developed."

Campbell said the best part of the island for a boating park (Sidney Spit) is already a provincial park. He said much of the island is in the Agricultural Land Reserve and the acreage which can be used for residential purposes is zoned for 10-acre minimum lots.

Campbell said he would rather have people living on the island, protecting their properties, with the public having beach access than have the state buy it for vandals.

Let's Look Again at the Library Move

max low

It would seem that Victoria's Mike Young was talking exclusively about himself and his fellow mayors when talking about the on-again, off-again Greater Victoria Public Library move.

The move from cramped library quarters at Yates and Blanshard to two floors in the new provincial government building on Broughton has been a yo-yo sort of thing because of a promised provincial grant that wasn't promised. If you follow me.

After much thinking twice about it, aldermen of Victoria, Saanich, Esquimalt and Oak Bay decided to go along with the move. It involves the library paying the government an annual rent of $412,500 — but only with the proviso there is a built-in option to purchase. And that the government come through with a $400,000 grant the mayors insist Deregulation Minister Sam Bawlf promised for the move.

Sam now says the library people are more likely to get $150,000 and that he never promised them anything.

So it's a sort of stalemate with the mayors saying either the government comes up with the $400,000 or the library stays where it is. But Mike Young emerged from a meeting the municipal leaders had recently with Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis feeling positively positive. Library-moving hopes were still alive, he said.

Speaking fondly of the rental premises in the new building on Broughton, Young said:

"Everybody agrees that it would be the best possible prospect for Greater Victoria and nobody wants to see it slip by."

On the contrary, sir. If we're speaking about the people of Greater Victoria (and let's try doing that for once), everybody does not agree. And there are those, I know, who would love to see it race by.

They are the ones who object to their money being spent to move into and start up ($439,000 is going to be needed for that alone) a library in a building they feel will be too small almost immediately.

It probably will be, too, as the two floors in the Broughton street building cover 50,000 square feet, only 14,000 more than the 36,000-square-foot library on Yates where book-lovers bump into one another.

It's ridiculous when you think that the relatively small city of St. Catharines in Ontario recently opened a new 63,000-square-foot library or and when you consider that Winnipeg has one with 130,000 square feet.

Then there are those who feel it's daft to pay $4 million in rent to the government over the next 10 years and still have nothing to show for it.

Yet one article I read said "the library board's view has been all along that the rent-a-library idea is only a stop-gap measure and it intends to launch a search for a suitable site for a permanent library as soon as the current agreement is concluded."

How absurd!

That's why everyone doesn't agree, Mr. Young, and why there are those who say why not look for a permanent home for the library before building costs become even more inflated.

Those like Maggi Lynn, who suggested to the mayors the old Crystal Gardens would be an ideal place.

Well Maggi, a woman quite involved in community affairs, was laughed down on that one.

But she and other members of the James Bay Residents' League then suggested the government sell the almost-vacant St. Ann's Academy to the municipalities for $1 (much the same way the government acquired the Crystal from the city) and that it be renovated.

"Then, instead of being left cold by a rented sterile office-type building on Broughton, we could have one of the most beautiful community libraries in Canada," says Maggi. "There's plenty of room in St. Ann's — more than 55,000 square feet in the main building alone and about 10 acres of grounds — and they could expand there until hell freezes over.

"They'll tell you it's too expensive or it isn't feasible to renovate St. Ann's, just the way they'll say it isn't a good idea to buy the property behind the old library on Yates and expand that, and they'll push ahead with something new downtown," she adds. "But these things are feasible and I think they'd better start thinking about people instead of the developers and the downtown businessmen."

Cook Up a South-of-the-Border Style Fiesta

cooking with kay

By KAY SPICER

Tortilla, taco, tostada? No, they're not a trendy version of tic-tac-toe. They're foods from south-of-the-border, down-Mexico-way and they're moving north in popularity. More and more Canadians are developing a taste for Mexican cuisine. Soon the taco will be as familiar as the pizza.

The tortilla, staple of many Mexican dishes has been around for centuries. Traditionally made of corn ground into fine flour, it's been dubbed the national bread of Mexico.

Not at all like our bread, the tortilla is very flat, round and unleavened — more like a thin pancake.

Folded around meat or fowl, beans, guacamole or fresh-chopped vegetables, tortillas are the basis for tacos. Crisply fried and piled with meat, fish or fowl with a sauce poured over them they become tostadas.

Beans and corn appear in some form at every meal. Chilies, from mild to hot, season nearly every main dish. Pungent herbs and spices similar to those used here — allspice, anise, bay leaf, cloves, cinnamon, oregano, parsley and especially coriander, flavor all kinds of foods.

Traditional Mexican dishes are usually cooked in or accompanied by a sauce. Pureed tomatoes, onions and chilies are used as the base for sauces which are then flavored with garlic, nuts, herbs and spices and sometimes chocolate.

Often it took Aztec women half a day to make a sauce with a crude mortar and pestle. Today, the ingredients can be whirled together in seconds in our modern blenders.

Snappy seasoning blends are available in little packets to help give a Mexican touch. Look for taco seasoning mix, enchilada sauce mix, and chili mix. That's the ultimate in convenience.

The exciting flavor of Mexican foods is always enhanced by a crisp green salad and crunchy tortilla chips with guacamole dip (toss a little of the dip on greens for a super salad sensation). Margaritas or homemade Sangria are dazzling company at a Mexican meal. Dessert deserves something cool and sweet, like whole fresh fruit or a fruit compote.

Fiesta foods are even better when they're served on a Mexican-inspired table, especially if it's party time. A multi-coloured, serape-striped cloth provides a good base. Clay pots or wicker baskets brimming with fresh greenery and straw and paper flowers make a lovely centrepiece. Food served in casual crockery accents its taste appeal.

Hacienda Tostadas will add a hot Mexican touch to that special meal

To add a little spice to your cooking life try Mexican cuisine and have a fiesta.

HACIENDA TOSTADAS
(Makes 4 servings)

- 1 pound ground beef
- ⅔ cup chopped onion
- 1 teaspoon seasoned salt
- ½ teaspoon seasoned pepper
- 1 can (7½ ounce) tomato sauce
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- ½ teaspoon crushed oregano
- Salad oil
- 4 corn tortillas
- Tostada garnishes*

Green chili sauce, optional

Brown ground beef and onion. Add seasoned salt, seasoned pepper, tomato sauce, Worcestershire sauce and oregano. Cook 5 minutes. Heat oil, 1 inch deep, in heavy skillet. Fry tortillas, one at a time, until crisp and browned. Place ¼ of meat mixture on each crisp tortilla.

Top with Tostada garnishes such as grated cheddar cheese, shredded lettuce, chopped tomato and sliced onion. Serve with green chili sauce, if desired.

TOSTADA SALAD
(Makes 6 servings)

- 1 pound ground beef
- 1 package taco seasoning mix
- ¾ cup water
- ¾ teaspoon seasoned salt
- 1 can (14 oz.) red kidney beans, drained
- 4 tomatoes, cut into wedges
- 1 avocado, peeled, cut into thin slices
- 1 package (6¼ ounce) tortilla chips
- 1 head lettuce, torn into small pieces
- 4 ounces cheddar cheese, grated
- 1 cup chopped onion
- ¾ cup Thousand Island style dressing

Brown the ground beef; drain fat. Add the taco seasoning mix, water, seasoned salt and beans. Cover; simmer for 10 minutes. Reserve some of the tomato wedges, avocado slices and tortilla chips for use as a garnish.

Combine all of the remaining ingredients in a large salad bowl; add the ground beef mixture and lightly toss all of the ingredients. Garnish with the reserved tomatoes, avocado and tortilla chips. This salad is best served immediately.

MEXICAN TACOS—CALIFORNIA STYLE
(Makes 8 tacos)

Tacos will be a favorite with family and popular with guests. Serve them buffet style. It's easy and fun when everyone makes their own taco. Spoon well-seasoned meat filling in the bottom of each taco shell, then heap on shredded lettuce, grated cheese and chopped tomatoes. For a deluxe taco don't be satisfied with just tomatoes, cheese and lettuce; add olives, onion, avocado and a dollop of sour cream ... super size and super good.

Serve with icy cold drinks and fruit sherbet.

- 1 pound ground beef
- 1 package taco seasoning mix
- 1 cup water
- 1 package taco shells
- Shredded lettuce
- Grated cheese
- Chopped tomtoes
- Sliced olives
- Chopped onion
- Sliced avocado
- Sour cream

Brown ground beef, stirring until crumbly. Drain fat. Add taco seasoning mix and water. Stir. Bring to a boil, reduce heat, simmer 15 to 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. When ready to serve spoon about 3 tablespoons meat filling in bottom of each taco shell. Top with shredded lettuce, grated cheese, chopped tomatoes, sliced olives, chopped onion, sliced avocado and sour cream.

BEEF AND CHEESE ENCHILADAS
(Makes 8 servings)

- 1 package enchilada sauce mix
- 1 Can (5½ ounce) tomato paste
- 3 cups water
- 1 pound ground beef
- 1 teaspoon seasoned salt
- 1 package (10-12 ounce) cheddar cheese, grated (about 2½/3 cups
- ½ cup sliced ripe olives, optional
- 8 corn tortillas

Combine enchilada sauce mix, tomato paste and water in saucepan. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer 15 minutes. Brown ground beef until crumbly. Sprinkle with seasoned salt. Drain fat; cool.

Combine all but 1 cup cheese with beef. If desired, add ripe olives (drained). Pour ½ cup of prepared enchilada sauce into a shallow baking dish.

Dip each tortilla into remaining hot enchilada sauce. Place about ½ cup beef mixture in centre of each tortilla. Fold sides of tortilla over filling and place in dish, seam side down. Pour remaining sauce over enchiladas.

Sprinkle with remaining 1 cup cheese. Bake in 350 deg. F oven 20 minutes or until thoroughly hot.

Papaya soup's a lunch, brunch or dinner dazzler

Hot Idea for Soup On the Cool Side

Isn't it the natural human inclination to choke a bowl of piping-hot soup with a whole platoon of crackers? Here's an innovative soup idea that: (a) is not served hot; (b) does not require crackers. What kind of soup is this, you ask? Papaya Fruit Soup, of course.

The papaya, sometimes known as the sunshine melon from Hawaii, is teamed up in this unusual recipe with low-fat yogurt to produce a dazzling brunch, lunch or dinner puree. This soup variation seems destined to give new meaning to the word soup. It can be used as an elegant appetizer or as a low-calorie easy day light meal idea.

The papaya is pear-shaped in appearance, and when ripe has a deep, golden-colored meat. The papaya is ripe when it yields to gentle pressure. However, the outside skin coloring may range from a green with a yellow blush to half-green, half-yellow. It usually turns more and more yellow as it ripens.

Papayas can be purchased while still firm and then ripened fully at room temperature at home. Once ripe, papayas can be stored in the refrigerator for up to a week. Unused portions should be covered with plastic wrap and refrigerated.

In addition, papayas hold quite a surprise for the weight conscious — one-half an average papaya contains only about 80 calories — even less than a grapefruit.

PAPAYA FRUIT SOUP

- 1 soft papaya, peeled, seeded
- 1 cup plain low-fat yogurt
- 1 cup milk
- ⅛ teaspoon cinnamon
- ¼ teaspoon nutmeg
- ¼ cup sugar

Combine all ingredients in blender; puree until smooth. Serve chilled. Makes 4 servings.

MD SAYS MUFFIN A DAY THWARTS GALLSTONES

MONTREAL (CP) — A bran muffin a day helps keep gallstones away, says an Edmonton doctor.

Dr. Rod McDougall told a physicians' convention here that bran seems to prevent their formation, although it does nothing to reduce the size of gallstones which have already formed.

Gallstones are caused when cholesterol deposits end up in the gall bladder instead of being dissolved by the "detergent action" of the liver's bile acids. When there is too much cholesterol for the bile to handle, it forms crystals which eventually become gallstones.

Dr. McDougall said a study at the University of Alberta showed that results begin after only three days of a daily bowl of bran. The amount of bile acids excreted doubled in patients and the amount of cholesterol eliminated had significantly increased.

Cholesterol crystals, the preliminary stage of the ailment, disappeared in patients who ate a daily bowl of bran for a month, and no new stones appeared.

The bran acts to speed the bile into the digestive system and out via the body's elimination system, taking with it the cholesterol.

Dr. McDougall advised eating bran cereal or bran muffins, and for those who can't stomach it, stringy vegetables such as celery or stringbeans.

The problem affects about two of every 10 Canadians and there are about 80,000 operations a year in Canada for removal of the gall bladder, the only known cure.

Dr. Noel Williams of Dalhousie University told the annual meeting of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada here that gallstones are more common in overweight people and in women who have had several children.

The more children a woman has had, the more likely she is to get stones and the chances are doubled for a woman taking oral contraceptives, he noted.

McDougall added that while the pill alone will not cause gallstones, women who take it and already have a predisposition toward stones are prime targets.

Gallstones are also becoming more and more common in young people in their 20s and 30s, said McDougall. He attributed this, in part, to the fact that their diets contain more refined carbohydrates such as refined sugar and flour than in the past.

Williams said his Halifax group hopes eventually to come up with a diet that will prevent gallstones.

The group has already shown that while diets high in protein protect against the saturation of bile acids with cholesterol, high-carbohydrate diets increase the cholesterol content, particularly in women taking the pill.

Variety-Plus in Breadmaking

hilda beastall

Making bread at home is still one of the more inspiring forms of food preparation, perhaps because it is capable of variation with each baking.

Most of us eat bread every day so there is no need to wait for a special occasion to make bread, nor is the small quantity from these recipes likely to become stale if made for one or two people.

The recipes may be used, however, as a guide to experienced breadmakers who already bake larger quantities but would like to vary their loaves in an interesting and nutritionally beneficial way.

For small appetites of young children, and for older people, and for invalids who lack interest in food, homemade bread with a different texture and flavor at each baking will work wonders. There is also freedom to make varying shapes to add interest. Remember how we used to love buns, rolls and twists on special occasions as children or when eating out?

Particularly useful for people cooking usually for one, these recipes are small enough to be handled easily in mixing. There is no kneading; and no long rising periods.

The variety of bread shapes produced would likely last for about a week without buying a commercial loaf.

For two people, usually eating all meals at home, the use of buns and other "fancy" shapes certainly add interest and are perfect to take out on impromptu picnics — summer or winter.

The first recipe has a little millet flour, adding different flavor and high nutirition.

OAT-WHEAT BREAD

- ½ cup warm water
- 1 tsp. sugar
- 1 Tbsp. baking yeast (or 1 pkt)
- ½ cup hot water
- 3 Tbsp. soft margarine
- 1 Tbsp sugar
- ½ tsp. salt
- 1 small egg
- 1½ cups wholewheat flour
- ½ cup millet flour
- 1 cup oat flakes (start with ½ cup)

In large warm mixing bowl measure warm water. Add sugar, mix; sprinkle yeast over surface. Let stand in warm plsace 10 minutes or until bubbly.

Meanwhile, combine hot water, margarine, sugar and salt in small bowl until dissolved. Add to yeast mixture and stir.

Beat in egg with wooden mixing spoon.

Add wholewheat and millet flour and beat well until smooth. Should be a soft batter. Add and beat in the oat flakes. If it seems too thin, add a quarter cup unbleached flour to thicken a little, beating well.

Spoon into a well greased and floured round or fluted mould for one loaf; or make one small loaf and four large round buns in foil pans. All should be well greased and floured for easy removal.

Look around for various packages of small foil pans, these are re-usable for two or three years if well washed, dried and stored.

Put the bread pan(s) into cold oven; turn heat to 35 deg. C (about 95 deg. F) for about 10 minutes until half risen. Turn heat off and leave pans in oven until risen to double. Then turn heat up to hot 220 deg. C (425 deg. F) for 10 minutes to check rising and begin baking.

Then down to moderate baking temperature 177 deg. C until cooked — about 30 minutes.

According to position in oven, you may need a piece of foil loosely over a loaf after the high heat to prevent scorching.

Turn bread and buns out at once on wire rack to cool.

This method of rising bread is simple after the first time. Just memprize or write down the sequence and times for the different temperatures. It works with all the breads I have made and certainly cuts down on breadmaking time.

The next bread is quite different again, for it is a firm dough that can be handled and shaped into braids, round small buns or loaves to be baked on a cookie tray. The rice makes a dense texture.

Have the 3 cups cooked brown rice prepared the day before.

This is a highly nutritious bread with brown rice, wholewheat flour, soy flour and skim milk powder.

RICE BREAD

- ¼ cup warm water
- ¼ tsp. sugar
- 1 Tbsp. bakers yeast (1 pkt.)
- ¼ cup hot water
- 3 Tbsp. soft margarine
- 2 Tbsp. sugar
- 1 tsp. salt
- 3 cups cooked brown rice
- 2 cups wholewheat flour
- 1 cup soy flour
- ½ cup skim milk powder
- 1 cup unbleached flour (approx. if needed)

In large mixing bowl, dissolve yeast in warm water with sugar. In small bowl, pour hot water over margarine, sugar and salt; stir to dissolve.

When cooled a little, add margarine mixture to yeast mixture in large bowl. Stir all together.

Stir in cooked brown rice. It will have a little moisture in the cooked grains.

Then begin adding wholewheat flour, beating well with wooden spoon. Add milk powder and soy flour, beating and stirring as long as possible to incorporate air and develop the gluten in the flour. This will be a firm dough.

Turn on to floured board, and with hands work in some unbleached flour until dough holds its shape. Divide into two equal pieces.

With a little more flour, shape one into a small loaf and place on well-greased cookie tray.

Take second piece, divide into three equal parts. Form each part into round strand about nine inches long. Join together at top end; braid loosely. Join the three bottom ends together. Lift carefully to place on greased floured cookie tray beside the loaf.

Put into cold oven; turn heat to 35 deg. C (95 F.) for 10 minutes until half risen. Turn heat off until risen to double. Then turn heat up to hot 220 C (425 F) for 10 minutes to check rising.

Then turn down to moderate 177 deg. C. until cooked, about 30 mintues. Cover with foil loosely, if necessary, to prevent scorching.

Remove to wire rack to form crust during cooling.

Try these breads once and you will soon be making your own changes in flours, and in shapes, and really enjoying bread as a part of two meals each day, at least.

Whole Wheat Crepes

The following metric recipe for Whole Wheat Crepes is an economical way of serving crepes as a main dish. Fill the crepes with a mixture of finely diced turkey, onions, mushrooms, nuts and some cheese sauce. Roll up and pour more cheese sauce on top.

WHOLE WHEAT CREPES

- 100 mL all-purpose flour
- 50 mL whole wheat flour
- 1 mL sugar
- 4 beaten eggs
- 350 mL milk
- 30 mL melted butter

Mix dry ingredients. Gradually beat in eggs and milk to make a smooth batter. Stir in butter. Pour 25 mL batter into well-greased 16 cm hot frypan; tilt pan to form a thin layer of batter on bottom. Cook over medium heat until lightly browned (about 1 min.). Turn and brown other side.

A PLEASANT CHANGE from the usual fare of frankfurters and sauerkraut is this Kraut 'n Frank Pizza featuring sliced franks baked atop a light crust made quickly and easily from a biscuit mix.

Kraut-Frank Variation

A pleasant change from the familiar versions, the Kraut 'n Frank Pizza features tangy-crisp sauerkraut and juicy frankfurter slices. They bake atop a light crust made quickly and easily from a biscuit mix.

This tasty duo not only delights the appetite, but provides nutritious eating as well. Moreover, kraut and franks are both ready-to-eat foods and require a minimum of preparation.

Consider some of the delicious ways to enjoy the kraut-frank combo. At lunch, bake up a batch of Kraut-Stuffed Frankfurter Twists, and watch them disappear. For a between-meal pick-up, spoon hot or cold sauerkraut on to the ever-popular hot dog. For dinner, enhance a platter of steamed franks and kraut by garnishing it with fried apple slices or broiled tomato halves.

KRAUT 'N FRANK PIZZA

1 package (¼ oz.) dry yeast
¾ cup very warm water
1½ cups biscuit mix

PIZZA TOPPING

¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 can (8oz.) tomato sauce
1 teaspoon Italian herb seasoning
2 tablespoons chopped onion
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
¼ cup sliced stuffed green olives
1½ cups well drained sauerkraut
1 pound frankfurters
¼ pound mozzarella cheese, sliced

To prepare Pizza Crust, dissolve yeast in warm water. Add biscuit mix and mix well to make stiff dough. Press into oiled 12-inch pizza pan with oiled fingers.

For Pizza Topping, sprinkle half of Parmesan cheese over crust. Mix tomato sauce with Italian herb seasoning and spoon half over crust, spreading thin. Sprinkle with chopped onion, green pepper and olives, saving a few slices of olives for garnish.

Spread sauerkraut over pizza and top with remaining tomato sauce. Split franks in half lengthwise and place cut sides up on pizza, spoke fashion.

Cut slices of mozzarella cheese into wedges and arrange between franks. Garnish center with olive slices. Sprinkle with remaining Parmesan cheese and bake on lower rack of 425-degree oven for 25 to 30 minuntes.

Allow pizza to stand for 5 minutes before cutting into wedges to serve. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Variation: ⅓ cup hamburger relish may be used in place of onion, green pepper and olives. And, ¼ teaspoon each of dry oregano and rosemary and 1 teaspoon dry parsley may be used in place of Italian herb seasoning.

Kraut-stuffed franks can be put together in an instant. Serve them at lunch with a steaming bowl of creamy tomato soup.

KRAUT-STUFFED FRANKFURTER TWISTS

10 frankfurters (1lb.)
3 to 4 oz. Cheddar cheese, cut into sticks
1 cup sauerkraut, drained
2 packages (7.5 oz. each) refrigerator biscuits

Split each frankfurters, lengthwise. Spread open and place cheese sticks in centres. Top with sauerkraut. Roll two biscuits together to form a rope, about 10-inch long. Wrap around frankfurter. Repeat with remaining biscuits and frankfurters. Place on greased baking sheet. Bake at 375 degrees for 15 minutes or until browned. Makes 10.

SPANISH RICE

6 slices bacon
1 lb. ground beef
½ cup chopped onion
¼ cup green pepper
¼ cup chopped celery
1 can (19 oz.) tomatoes, undrained (crush tomtoes)
1 can (12 oz.) whole kernel corn, undrained
¾ cup water
½ cup chili sauce
1 can (4½ oz.) sliced mushrooms, undrained
¾ cup uncooked long grain rice
1 tsp. salt (or to taste)
1 tsp. brown sugar
½ to 1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce

In skillet, cook bacon until crisp; drain. Set aside. Reserve 1 tbs. bacon rippings. Into drippings, place ground beef, onion, green pepper and celery. Cook until meat is nicely browned and vegetables are tender. Add remaining ingredients. Stir to distribute seasonings. Simmer; covered, for approx. 35 minutes or until rice is tender.

Simple, Rich and So Digestible!

60—MINUTE GOURMET

By PIERRE FRANEY

During my many years as chef at the late Pavillon Restaurant in new York, I was as fascinated by the food preferences of le patron, Henri Soule, as were any of the clientele. Cost in that kitchen meant very little in those by-gone years; there was always a count or a duke with an appetite to be appeased by grouse or breast of guinea hen or fresh foie gras or turbot freshly flown in from France.

Oddly, Soule shunned the luxury foods and ate very simply, generally in mid-afternoon after the last customer had departed. I remember well, however, that one of his favorite dishes was one of the simplest to make. And it was rich.

This was fresh crab meat cooked in a cream sauce and served over lightly broiled Smithfield ham on toast. There was good reason why he admired this dish. The crab was in a cream sauce lightly flavored with sherry wine, and although rich, it was easy to digest; the Smithfield ham (when I make the dish today I generally use thinly sliced prosciutto, which is more widely available) offered a highly complementary contrast in textures and flavor.

This is the sort of dish that numerous years ago would have been thought of as chafing-dish cookery. It is done with great speed and little effort. To prepare it, cream is cooked down with a touch of chopped shallots and dry sherry. The crab meat (already cooked, of course) is sauteed quickly in a little butter and the two elements are combined. Once toast is made and the prosciutto run under the broiler for a matter of seconds, the dish is ready to assemble and serve.

As with many fish and seafood dishes, lightly cooked cucumbers make an excellent foil for the crab dish. These, too, can be prepared quickly.

CREAMED CRAB WITH PROSCIUTTO ON TOAST

- 1 pound fresh crab meat
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped shallots
- 5 tablespoons dry sherry wine
- 1 cup heavy cream
- 1 egg yolk, lightly beaten
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 4 slices toast
- 8 thin slices prosciutto or other cooked ham.

1. Pick over the crab to remove all traces of shell and cartilage, if necessary. Drain well.

2. Heat half the butter in a heavy skillet and add the shallots. Cook, stirring, until wilted. Add four tablespoons of the wine and cook down. Reduce the liquid to about half.

3. Add the cream and cook down about five minutes over high heat.

4. Meanwhile, heat the remaining butter and add the crab meat. Add the remaining tablespoon of wine and heat thoroughly. Remove from the heat.

5. Add a few spoons of the hot cream to the egg yolk and stir to blend. Return this mixture to the cream, stirring rapidly. Add the Worcestershire sauce. Remove from the heat.

6. Spoon and scrape the sauce over the crab meat.

7. Prepare the toast and keep warm.

8. Heat the prosciutto under broiler.

9. Place ham slices on toast and to with crab meat in cream sauce.

Yield: 4 servings.

SAUTEED CUCUMBERS

- 1 or 2 cucumbers, about one pound
- 2 tablespoons butter
- Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
- 1 tablespoon finely chopped dill.

1. The new so-called "gourmet" or "burpless" cucumber is good for this. Trim off the ends.

2. Cut the cucumbers into lengths of one and one-half inches. Cut each length in half. Peel the cucumber and cut away the soft centre, leaving "batons." Set aside.

3. Heat the butter in a skillet and add the cucumber batons. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cook, tossing and stirring, so that the pieces cook evenly. Cook for a total of about two minutes. Sprinkle with dill and serve hot.

Yield: 4 servings.

New York Times

Cranberry Cheese Cake Filling

- 1 (8-oz.) pkg. cream cheese, softened
- ½ cup whipping cream
- ¼ cup sugar
- 1 tsp. vanilla
- 1 (14-oz.) can whole cranberry sauce
- ¼ cup toasted coconut

Beat cream cheese until light and fluffy. Whip cream until thickened but not stiff; add sugar and vanilla and beat until stiff. Fold into cream cheese until smooth. Fold in cranberry sauce. Spoon into graham cracker shell. Chill until firm. Garnish with toasted coconut.

4-H SEMINAR SET

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian 4-H Council will hold its annual citizenship seminar in Ottawa from April 28 to May 2, one of the meeting's organizers said Thursday.

Bill Martin of the Manitoba department of agriculture said the seminar will discuss the rights and responsibilities of children—a topic arranged because the United Nations has designated 1979 as the International Year of the Child.

A total of 60 youngsters—six from each province—are to attend the seminar.

Player On Left Eating Too Much Onion Soup?

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI) — One of the hottest-selling card games in France represents a plot by the health ministry with a formidable goal — to change the eating and drinking habits of the food-loving French.

The game, Mangez Juste (Eat Correctly), sells for $2.50 at newsstands. That is also part of the plot: If you give something free people might throw it in the wastebasket, whisper the plotters at the health ministry.

The game is part of a campaign launched by the health ministry last June to persuade the French to consume less fat and sugar and more vegetables and fruits, more bread for roughage and more water and less wine.

"Two out of three French people eat a bad diet, too much fat from meat, cheese, sausages, pates (meat pastes and loafs)," said Francoise Buhl, president of the French Committee of Health Education, a government branch assigned to carrying out the diet campaign of Health Minister Simone Veil, until now, at least, the most popular cabinet member in France.

"The French love to eat well, but they are badly nourished," said Mrs. Buhl. "One says the French dig their graves with their teeth. Over-eating attacks as many victims as famines in past centuries.

"So we hit upon the idea of a family game that would teach people to eat something daily from each of the six groups of foods necessary for a balanced diet: meat-fish-eggs, milk-cheese-yogurt, butter-oil-lard, rice-pastry-bread, raw fruits-vegetables, cooked fruits-vegetables. Plus water. People play cards a lot in France and families like to play together."

When the card game, which uses two decks, first went on sale more than 115,000 were sold in 1½ months. An improved version goes on sale this month.

Next September the game, plus posters and pamphlets, will be installed in elementary and secondary schools.

Another measure of success is the 300 to 400 letters a week the health ministry receives about the campaign. Mrs. Buhl, a slender and healthy-looking blonde, says people ask for the game, plus diet pamphlets, advice on breakfasts and whether bread really is healthy.

The game calls for each player to draw a card representing a family eating a certain meal. Each player then is dealt seven cards. Through drawing and discarding, players try to collect cards showing foods corresponding to the family's balanced menu.

There are traps:

"You ate too much cake at your cousin's wedding," one card says. "You have the right to only one more card of a dish containing sugar."

"Your neighbor to your right has eaten too many potato chips," says another. "Draw a card from his hand and discard one of yours."

Players must avoid drawing more than six dishes with fat or three with sugar.

The cards illustrate in living color a gourmand's dreams: stuffed hearts of artichokes, duck casserole, camembert cheese, for example.

The program emphasizes drinking water, even though a favorite expression in this wine-drinking nation is "water is just to wash your feet."

Mrs. Buhl stresses that the program is not anti-alcohol, but condemns wine because of its sugar.

The diet campaign does not order adults to drink milk, as did a disastrous program of Prime Minister Pierre Mendes-France in the 1950s.

"There is a limit, after all," said Mrs. Buhl.

The campaign pushes bread, although long lines still form at bakeries twice a day. Mrs. Buhl said bread consumption has dropped 50 per cent in France since economic prosperity increased meat eating.

"Bread has been so downgraded that we had to rehabilitate it in moderate quantities for intestinal balance," she said.

The program makes no attempt to correct what the English, Dutch, Americans and others think is an appalling mistake in the French diet: coffee and a roll for breakfast with no fruit, cheese, eggs or cereal. Mrs. Buhl's staff merely advises people if they want to eat a big breakfast, then they have to cut down on the usual copious hot lunch.

Health Minister Veil already has scored a success with an anti-tobacco campaign. But it still is too early to tell whether people buy the card game because it is fun to play or whether they really want to improve their diet.

"It is premature to draw conclusions as to whether people are eating better," Mrs. Buhl said. "We will not know the results of consumption of bread or vegetables until a long inquiry can be made.

"Also, it may take several generations to change the habits passed on from mother to daughter."

Fruit Sweeteners Vary

Consumers now have a choice of degree of sweetness in canned and frozen fruits.

Government regulations permit a variety of syrup strengths for processed fruit, ranging from very heavy syrup to slightly sweetened water.

Fruit may also be packed in fruit juices without the addition of extra sugar. Water-packed fruit had formerly been canned mainly in large containers for institutions.

These regulations have changed in response to food shoppers' preference. According to the food consultants at Agriculture Canada, Canadians' tastes are changing and they are becoming more calorie conscious and more interested in reducing sugar intake.

This explains the preference for light or slightly sweetened syrup in processed fruit.

Five syrup strengths are now permitted, based on the soluble solids content of the packing medium:

Extra heavy syrup, found mostly in imported fruits, has a minimum of 25 per cent soluble solids. This includes the sugar syrup and the juice from the fruit.

Heavy syrup has a minimum of 18 or 19 per cent soluble solids and represents the syrup strength most often seen on the market.

Light or light fruit juice syrup has a minimum of 14 or 15 per cent, while slightly sweetened water or slightly sweetened fruit juice has a minimum of 10 to 11 per cent soluble solids. Also available is fruit packed in its own juice without the addition of extra sugar.

Less sweet canned and frozen fruits will become commonplace in supermarkets if consumerss ask for them. Packers are moving slowly, waiting to see if consuer demand is great enough to warrant the change.

If the less sweet products are not on the shelf, then ask grocers to stock up.

RELAXED OBSTETRICS

MURRAY, Utah (AP) — With its floral wallpaper, antique furniture and soft lights, the room befits a good hotel. But Cottonwood Hospital officials say their Heritage Room is a new idea in obstetrics, designed to give a relaxed atmosphere to hospital births. The room even has a plush armchair for the father, who is encouraged to be present throughout the mother's hospital stay.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I met Mac two years ago. It was love at first sight — for me. I'm 29, divorced and self-supporting. Mac is a handsome, 37-year-old Irish cop, separated from his wife.

He takes me to nice places when he can afford it, but he's usually broke because he loves to gamble. (Mostly, sports and the horses.)

I'm always buying tickets to sports events, theatres, etc., and we eat at my place a lot. Mac hates for me to spend my money on him, but I can't help it. I want to be with him as much as possible.

He begs me not to get "too serious" about him because he doesn't want any permanent involvement, but it's too late. I'm already in love with him. He keeps reminding me that I am his best friend. Abby, I don't want his friendship. I want love and marriage.

Is this situation hopeless?
— HURTING

DEAR HURTING: Yes. A one-sided love is slow torture. And the chances for his friendship developing into the kind of love you want are about 1,000 to 1. If Mac hasn't heard about Gamblers Anonymous, clue him in. There's a chapter near him — listed in the phone book. It's well worth the gamble.

DEAR ABBY: I am being severely criticized for giving a relative a vacuum cleaner and all the attachments for a wedding present.

If I'm wrong, please tell me so I won't go the practical route again and get laughed at.
— AUNT ROSE

DEAR AUNT ROSE: Don't apologize for your gift. It's reassuring to know that there are practical folks like you who refuse to get sucked into giving gifts that are more ornamental than useful.

DEAR ABBY: My husband refuses to make out a will. He has high blood pressure, prostate trouble, emphysema and diabetes.

I am so afraid that after skimping and saving for 45 years, he will die and leave me nothing. Everything we have is in both our names.

I am his beneficiary, as he is mine, on our life insurance policies. Legally, is this enough? Or do I have to worry about his relatives suing me for what they may claim is their fair share? They haven't bothered about him for the last 10 years, but they're the kind of people who would move right in and make trouble if there was any money in it for them.

Write back fast, Abby. I have no one else to turn to and every time I mention a will, my husband blows up.
— WORRIED SICK

DEAR ABBY: We have two small boys. One is four and the other is 2½. I feel that my husband expects too much too soon of them.

The little tykes come to the table happy and hungry, but by the time my husband gets through correcting their every move ("Sit up straight, take your elbows off the table, stop talking with your mouth full, you're eating too fast, you're eating too slow, etc.") these poor kids leave the table in tears with their plates practically untouched.

How can I make my husband understand that, besides making the boys dread mealtime, it could be bad for their health? — IN THE MIDDLE.

DEAR IN: You have three "little boys." Tell the one you're married to that there is a more effective way to teach children. It's true that serious digestive problems often develop when children (and adults as well) attempt to eat when they are upset.

Implore your husband to resist the urge to shout criticisms and orders at the table. Gentleness is the key word here. Should he forget, gently kick him in the ankle.

Some Drug Mixes Can be Dangerous

By L. L. Coleman, MD

I take a good many drugs for high blood pressure, gout and mild diabetes. I've always wondered if these drugs can be taken safely in combination. Is it possible for these drugs to act together in a dangerous way? — Mrs. D.L.

Dear Mrs. L.:

The newer knowledge of drugs has brought with it a greater degree of safety. Undoubtedly, some drugs have an adverse effect when taken with others. On the other hand, there are some drugs whose effectiveness is increased when taken with others.

When new drugs come on the market they are studied not only from the point of view of their own efficacy and safety, but also from the point of view of their interaction with other drugs. A great deal is known today about the side effects of each drug, singly or in combination with others.

Doctors carefully monitor their patients and evaluate all the drugs that their patients are taking. By doing so, they can regulate the dosage of the drugs and carefully supervise the duration for which they are prescribed.

It is well-known that some drugs should not be taken with others, and such combinations of drugs are carefully avoided. Manufacturers of drugs very specifically warn the doctor and the user when to avoid certain combinations of drugs or chemicals. You can be certain that your doctor is fully aware of any possibility of adverse effects or interaction of the drugs you are using.

Can a person with pernicious anemia be expected to live a normal life span? The diagnosis has just been made on my mother — Miss B.L.E.

Dear Miss E.:

Pernicious anemia is a complicated disease. Prior to 1926 recovery from this condition rarely occurred. At that time, however, it was found that pernicious anemia was caused by deficiency of a substance known as "intrinsic factor", which is produced in the stomach. This is responsible, in a complicated way, for the storage and utilization of vitamin B12.

Today, not a single person with pernicious anemia need be an invalid if the condition is diagnosed early and treated intensively. Liver in the diet is most effective in the control of pernicious anemia. Vitamin B12, given at regular intervals, in addition to a highly nourishing diet supplemented with iron and other minerals, keeps these patients alive and productive.

There are few greater scientific achievements than the control of this once-fatal disease. Unless complications arise, you have a great deal to hope for in relation to your mother's condition.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH ... Discard eye drops and eye droppers when an eye infection is cured.

Common ¢ents

By KATE MacQUEEN

Should you be tempted to buy a new electric percolator now that coffee prices are dropping, check the wattage before you buy one. Some fast-brewing pots have 1440 watts or more and such a pot should be plugged into a circuit by itself to prevent a possible blown fuse. Percs with 900 watts or less can be used on the same outlet as most small appliances, except for a toaster or iron.

Also, the higher the wattage, the more it costs to brew a pot.

Unless they're too numerous, scratches on a frying pan's non-stick finish make little or no difference in the pan' performance, and the scratches don't spread to wider gaps or cause chipping or peeling. But if you want to maintain that pristine surface and don't have enough kitchen tools for your non-sticks, use wooden spoons; they won't scratch.

Liberals 'Worst Managers'

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservatives challenged Prime Minister Trudeau Tuesday to call an election so voters can throw out "the worst managers of the Canadian economy ever."

The challenge came on a day of electioneering in the Commons as government and opposition MPs accused each other of causing the dollar to plunge to its lowest value in 40 years.

Tempers flared as MPs debated a motion by Opposition Leader Joe Clark condemning the government on grounds it is responsible for the dollar's fall to about 84 cents U.S. from about $1.02 U.S. in the last two years.

There was no vote on the motion.

Conservatives said the plight of the dollar is the most serious problem facing Canadians today, while Liberals argued that the Canadian economy is one of the strongest in the world.

New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent said the dollar is weak "because we have a weak Canadian government." The dollar would only rally when the government limited outflow of Canadian investment to ensure more investment at home and create jobs here.

Conservatives claimed the way to save the dollar was to put their party in power.

But Trudeau is afraid to call an election, Conservative industry critic John Crosbie said. "Being in power means more to you than the good of this country," he yelled at heckling Liberal MPs.

Clark said the government should consider surcharges to limit imports and special incentives for exports to help boost the sagging dollar. It is the first time Clark has made that suggestion, although it has been heard from other members of his party.

He said the only hope for the dollar lies in reducing the massive deficit Canada has in payments of such things as interest and dividends with the rest of the world.

This "current account" deficit has totalled more than $4 billion a year since 1976. Clark said it can be offset only by increasing the gap between the goods and services Canada sells abroad and what she imports — the so-called merchandise trade surplus.

Government spokesmen argued that the lower-valued dollar has helped make Canadian goods cheaper abroad and has helped boost the merchandise trade surplus to a record $3.5 billion last year.

Clark's proposal was strongly criticized by Transport Minister Otto Lang — pinch-hitting for Finance Minister Jean Chretien who was in New York — as a direct contradiction of Canada's arguments for freer world trade.

Lang said Clark and his finance critic, Sinclair Stevens — whom he referred to as Tweedle Dum and Tweedle Dumber — apparently had not noticed that Trudeau and leaders of the major industrial nations have all agreed in numerous meetings that more restrictions on trade would have a negative effect on their economies.

"We want an open world and freer and freer trade," Lang said.

Alan Martin, Chretien's parliamentary secretary, sparked a bitter dispute when he accused Conservatives of contributing to the dollar's fall by harping on the subject.

Conservative James Gillies, an economics professor from Toronto, jumped to his feet yelling: "The parliamentary secretary is a liar."

Crosbie chimed in: "He is a liar."

Both men later grudgingly apologized for using unparliamentary language. Said Crosbie: "If I called him a liar, what I meant was that he was a Liberal trying to stay in power. I know there is very little difference . . ."

NEW CITY FOURTH LARGEST

TORONTO (CP) — North York, a former Metropolitan Toronto borough, becomes Canada's newest city today and, with a population of 558,398 is fourth-largest in the country.

Mel Lastman, mayor of North York, declared his borough the City of North York. One of the first duties of the new city officials will be to change the wording on rubber stamps, signs and stationary.

"I've been snowed under by printers who have read about our change and called up to see if we needed new letterheads, " said John Reid, director of purchasing for North York.

Lastman estimated the cost of making North York Ontario's 42nd city will be about $1,000.

"Now North York is going to be on the map," the mayor said in an interview.

Some residents, however, doubt the declaration will give their community new recognition.

"I don't think many of the people in North York will be enthused," said resident Brian Williams, president of the Federation of Residents Associations of North York.

"Politically you have to do those kinds of things to get your name in the papers and get publicity."

THAT SMALL CHANGE IS TOO EXPENSIVE

OTTAWA (CP) — Inflation has hit the cost of making money.

Supply Minister Pierre De Bane said Tuesday the government may reduce the size of pennies and nickels because they cost too much.

The minister said it cost two cents to produce a penny and about six cents to produce a nickel "and that can't continue."

"What we're doing now is a thorough consultation with all those who could be touched, including telephone companies and vending machine firms," he said in an interview.

De Bane said the government lost $9.5 million in 1978 because of high mineral and production costs of the two coins.

"Decisions have to be taken in the near future about that question because the taxpayers are subsidizing the manufacture of nickels and pennies."

Earlier in the Commons De Bane was asked by Conservative Bill Kempling if the government is going to produce metric coins in 20-cent, 40-cent and 80-cent denominations.

But the minister, who dismissed the query in the House saying he was in no position to give any details, later said the idea is only a rumor.

Besides, he added, the country is already using a metric money system with dimes, quarters and dollars.

De Bane said a decision about the coin system could be expected within a few months.

"Vending associations say there is no problem in reducing the coin size but they ask that the nickel not be reduced to the size of a dime."

RCMP's Cobb studies documents

Little New On RCMP Activities

MONTREAL (CP) — A provincial inquiry into police wrongdoing in Quebec resumed public hearings Tuesday for the first time in nearly a year, but testimony from RCMP Chief Supt. Donald Cobb shed little new light on clandestine police operations here in the late 1960s and early 1970s.

Cobb, former director of the RCMP's anti-terrorist unit in Quebec, explained at length to the inquiry, headed by Quebec City labor lawyer Jean Keable, why he drafted a fake Front de Liberation du Quebec communique calling for a violent separatist revolution in Quebec.

Cobb, now Ottawa-based director of the Mounties' official languages department, said he saw "nothing illegal" in his actions, given the political situation in Quebec during and after the 1970 October Crisis, when terrorists kidnapped British diplomat James Cross and Quebec labor minister Pierre Laporte.

The purpose of the forged communique, he said, was to sow confusion in FLQ ranks by discouraging suspected terrorists from supporting the Parti Quebecois and its goal of attaining Quebec independence peacefully.

The communique, which Cobb wrote in December, 1971, denounced one-time FLQ theoretician Pierre Vallieres for rejecting terrorism. Vallieres had called on militant separatists to support the Parti Quebecois, but the RCMP felt that once within the ranks of a legitimate political party, suspected terrorists would be impossible to watch.

Cobb also told the inquiry he knew of at least 50 cells of the FLQ and other clandestine groups operating in the province in 1970-71.

He said that perhaps 150 to 200 people were involved in the FLQ, the Armee de Liberation du Quebec (ALQ) and other groups. The RCMP, he said, spent "thousands and thousands of hours" trying to find Vallieres, who had gone underground at the time.

Vallieres, the Mounties believed, was the only man with the leadership potential to unite the FLQ, ALQ and other cells.

The morning session of the inquiry adjourned when Cobb declined to reveal how many RCMP informants had managed to infiltrate terrorist or militant separatist groups.

The question was withdrawn at the opening of the afternoon session after Pierre Lamontagne, representing the police force, argued that the question exceeded the Keable inquiry's jurisdiction.

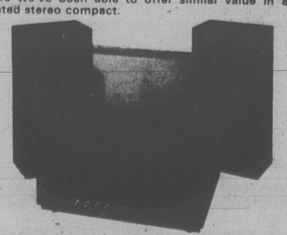

Resumption of the hearings comes almost exactly one year after a Quebec Court of Appeal ruling which shut down the inquiry. The Supreme Court partially reversed the ruling by allowing the commission to continue its work, but under strict jurisdictional limits.

Keable appears to have shifted the inquiry's focus to take a deeper look into the forged communique.

There have been reports that closed-door testimony has revealed the RCMP drafted several other false FLQ communiques, but Cobb denied any knowledge of such activity.

Gov't Spending Plans 'Incomplete, Unclear'

OTTAWA (CP) — Officials of the auditor-general's office Tuesday urged MPs to demand that the government publish spending plans the average person can understand.

Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell said he considers the spending information published now so unclear and incomplete that it is a "big gamble" for him to certify at the end of the year that the government really spent what it said it would.

Appearing before the Commons public accounts committee, Macdonell and his staff presented guides for revamping the more than 1,000 pages of spending estimates published annually.

The 1979-1980 estimates are expected later this month.

One of the auditor-general's most serious complaints was that half the money which passes through the federal government's hands never shows up in the spending estimates.

All transfer payments to individuals, corporations and other levels of government are excluded. Of last year's $47 billion of federal government expenditures, $24 billion were classified as "grants and contributions" and therefore excluded from the estimates.

The auditor-general recognizes that the federal government's contribution to most of these shared cost programs with the provinces is clearly spelled out in law, said officials of his office. Although this means it is not up to MPs to vote on these amounts, they should still have a chance to examine and question them.

Officials of Macdonell's office had a number of other complaints about the spending estimates:

—They contain too many complicated tables when simple written explanations would tell more;

—They contain too much distracting detail and not enough clear information on how much money each program actually costs;

—Important facts about planned expenditures are virtually impossible for parliamentarians and taxpayers to get their hands on. In one case, Macdonell's staff had to go to a cabinet minister's briefing notes for what they considered basic spending information. In another instance they had to dig through department of finance files;

—It is not clear which figures represent forecasts and which represent spending plans which have to be voted on by Parliament.

WANTED MAN KILLED BY SUBWAY

TORONTO (UPC) — George Hayashi, sought by Metro police in connection with the disappearance of $250,000 in letter carriers' union funds, died early today under the wheels of a subway train in York Mills station.

Police said the 58-year-old treasurer of the Toronto local was lying on the track waiting for the train to come, about 1.36 a.m.

Battle Looms on Compensation

OTTAWA (CP) — The government rejected a powerful union pitch Tuesday for withdrawal of a bill to link public service compensation increases to those in the private sector.

"We are not withdrawing the bill . . . unless we have some other agreement in place as to how similar principles could be operated," Labor Minister Martin O'Connell said after meeting a 20-member union delegation headed by Shirley Carr, executive vice-president of the Canadian Labor Congress.

Ms. Carr said the labor movement will not consider alternative agreements unless the bill, which she described as "thoroughly wrongheaded," is withdrawn.

The labor delegation told O'Connell and Treasury Board President Judd Buchanan to dump the bill or face a hard battle with the labor movement.

"We will not consider changes or amendments . . . It is non-negotiable as far as we are concerned," Ms. Carr said after the meeting.

"We object to the whole principle of the bill because it treads on the whole basis of the trade-union movement's hard-fought rights to bargain collectively."

O'Connell said the government remains committed to the principle "of fair comparability" between the public and private sectors.

There is a need for a comparability agreement of some sort because public sector bargaining is not conducted in the constraints of the market.

"Can you put the government out of business by a high settlement?"

It is imperative that public sector wages do not run above those in comparable private sector operations because it could prompt a leap-frog effect, O'Connell said.

Edmonton Curfew Setback

EDMONTON (CP) — City council Tuesday defeated by a 6-4 vote first reading of a controversial bylaw which would impose a 10 p.m. curfew on children under the age of 16. The bylaw now will be back before council in two weeks.

An amendment to have the curfew at midnight instead of the earlier time was also defeated.

The proposed bylaw, which has been in and out of committee and debated furiously for more than a month, received heightened publicity this week after a shooting incident Friday in which juveniles were involved. Two persons, including one of the juveniles, were killed.

Public Servants May Be Declining

TORONTO (CP) — Contrary to popular belief, the percentage of public servants in the labor force has probably declined in the 1970s, says a study released Tuesday by the Institute for Research on Public Policy.

The 188-page study Public Employment and Compensation in Canada: Myths and Realities was edited by David Foot, an associate professor of economics at the University of Toronto.

Foot compared popular impressions about the size, growth and wages in the public sector with the statistical evidence and found things may not be as bad as everyone thought.

He found the percentage of public servants in the labor force grew fastest in the 1950s, began to slow in the 1960s and in the 1970s stopped or even declined.

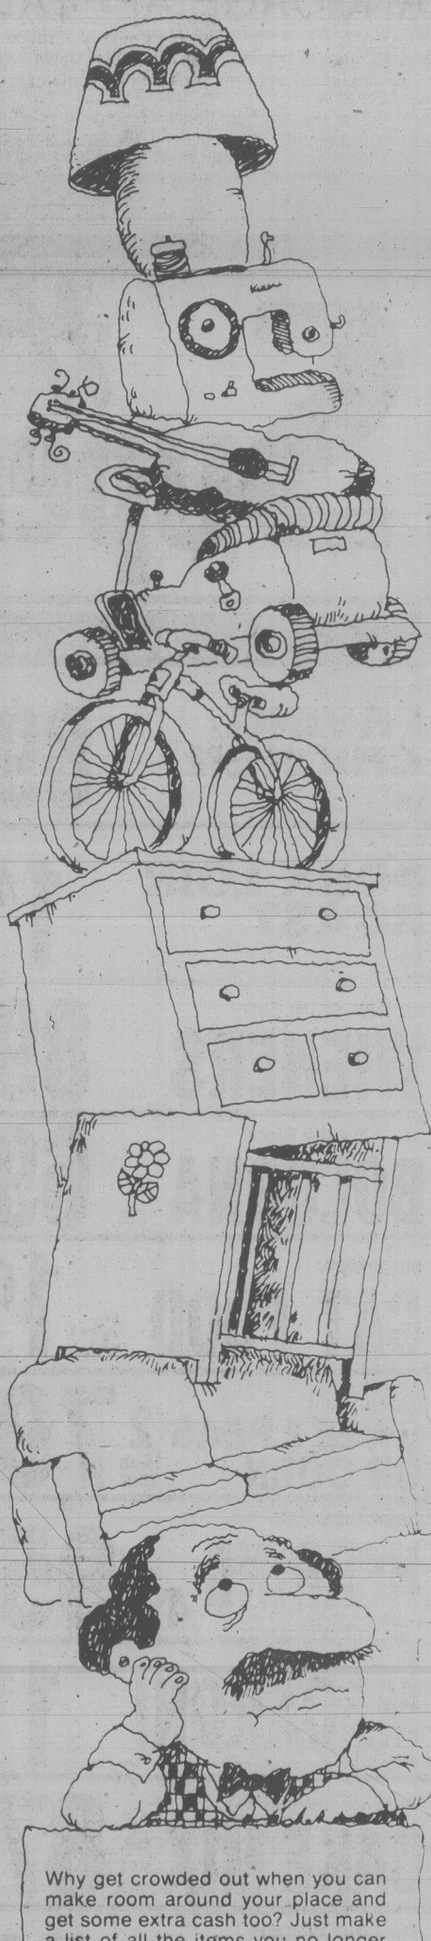

His work also noted the federal government's share of employment in the public sector is decreasing.

While the percentage of the labor force working for governments has stopped growing, the number of public employees per capita has kept rising.

Barre Leaves on an Uneasy Note

MONTREAL (CP) — French Premier Raymond Barre flew home to Paris Tuesday after weathering six days of a minor protocol skirmish between Quebec City and Ottawa.

Barre took pains not to offend either Quebec City or Ottawa during the state visit, stressing that France's special interest in the province's affairs would never lead it to meddle in Canadian domestic politics.

But even as he was leaving, the premier's visit again became a bone of contention as Quebec Premier Rene Levesque and federal Justice Minister Marc Lalonde traded barbs about Ottawa's handling of departure ceremonies at nearby Mirabel International Airport.

Earlier in the day, Barre met with an uneasy reaction from a Montreal crowd when he pointedly refused to repeat late President Charles de Gaulle's "Vive le Quebec Libre" — the 1967 diplomatic faux-pas that cooled relations between Canada and France for several years afterwards.

The Levesque-Lalonde incident started with a telegram, released to reporters by Levesque, from the federal external affairs department to Quebec officials saying that Ottawa was handling the ceremonial details of Barre's departure from Mirabel.

Signed by protocol chief Andre Couvette, it concluded: "I presume a representative of the Quebec government will accompany Barre to the airport . . . In any case, he will be cordially welcome to participate in the farewell ceremonies."

An angry Levesque, brandishing the telegram, told reporters: "There'll be a Quebec representative — I'll be there." This was public knowledge, he added.

Barre had just left the room in an apparent attempt to avoid involvement in the verbal scuffle.

Earlier in the day, Levesque was escorting Barre along the mezzanine of a busy downtown shopping mall when he suggested the French premier say a few words to the enthusiatic crowd below.

"Mr. Levesque sometimes makes suggestions," an obliging and jocular Barre told the crowd, "asking me if I would like to shout 'vive quelque chose' (long live something) from this balcony."

"So I want to ask you to shout with me: 'Vive les francais du Quebec' (Long live the French of Quebec)."

Barre's tact met with cool politeness from the crowd and brought some boos from those who expected him to echo De Gaulle's battle cry of the pro-independence movement.

Levesque later apologized for "spontaneously" nudging Barre as he did, telling reporters: "My initative was perhaps unseemly and led to certain expectations."

LANGUAGE APPEAL

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada will be asked Monday to hear an appeal against Quebec court judgments declaring sections of Quebec's language laws unconstitutional.

Last month the Quebec Court of Appeal ruled that the Quebec legislature went beyond its legal powers in passing a section of its language charter making French the only official language of the provincial courts and legislature.

Referendum Muddle

OTTAWA (CP) — There appears to be no question the Parti Quebecois can pose in its promised referendum that the federal government will consider straightforward, some senators said Monday.

"Nothing will be satisfactory," Quebec Liberal Senator Jean Marchand said during Senate committee hearings into the federal government's counter-referendum bill.

John Reid, federal-provincial relations minister, told the committee Ottawa would not hold a referendum on Quebec independence if the results of the Quebec vote are clear and unambiguous.

But after questioning Reid, some senators concluded no question would satisfy the federal government.

"It will always be a matter of judgment," said Ontario Liberal Senator Eugene Forsey.

Martial Asselin, a Progressive Conservative senator from Quebec, wondered if asking Quebecers to support or oppose sovereignty association would be sufficiently clear.

Reid replied: "I would accept it as legitimate question if someone defines sovereignty association."

Senator Asselin said the Quebec government could provide a definition the federal government would find unsatisfactory so it would have an excuse to launch a counter-referendum.

Metric Conversion . . . Or Confusion

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Metric conversion has become metric confusion to the majority of Canadians, opposition members claimed in the Commons Tuesday as they presse to have its implementation delayed.

A storm blew up suddenly as opposition members, hearing from irate constituents unhappy with the change to the metric systemn aired their feelings with jibes and jabs at Jack Horner, the minister in charge.

When he was an opposition member sitting as a Progressive Conservative, Horner was vigorously opposed to the metric system and the move to introduce it into this country.

In the Commons he was defending the metric commission. It comes under his jurisdiction as minister of industry trade and commerce. He said that his recollection was that in 1970 all parties in the House had agreed to the establishment of the commission.

"You must have been away then, Jack," shouted one opposition MP. "Where were you, Jack?" shouted another.

"The metric commission took it upon itself to form sectors to study," said the minister.

"Did you approve it?" queried one of his former Tory colleagues.

Horner retorted "at that time my leader did not even ask for my approval, nor did my leader seek the advice of caucus." (He was a Tory MP then.)

"I was not considered important to the leader at that time," he recalled.

"Shame, shame," several Liberal back-benchers interjected.

Douglas Neil, the Progressive Conservative from Moose Jaw, asked Horner if he was aware that some building products are available in metric but basically plywood and dimension lumber are manufactured only in imperial measurements because Americans are the chief purchasers. He urged Horner to hold up the conversion to etric in the lumber and housing industries.

There were loud shouts of "hear hear" in agreement from other opposition MPs.

Horner said the metric commission in its studies had approached the construction industry and asked for its co-operation. He said deadlines were established with that co-operation. But if the construction industry now wanted delays it should approach himself as minister in charge or go to the metric commission. Government MPs applauded.

Neil said he had never known Horner to be backward in telling his leader — when he was a Tory — what he thought about things.

There was vigorous applause from the opposition benches.

he opposition MPs pointed out that the United States government is having second thoughts about adopting the metric system. Also in Britain and Australia they were taking a second look at metrication.

Parcel 'Hockey' Denied

CALGARY (CP) — The Calgary president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers has denied allegations that city postal workers have been playing hockey with fragile parcels.

Jim Hall said Tuesday that allegations by Progressive Conservative MP Eldon Woolliams (Calgary North) were a "disgraceful slander" and that if the MP were prepared to repeat them outside the House of Commons the local would consider legal action.

Hall said the supervisory staff at the Calgary office is one of the most tyrannical in the country and that staff has little time or opportunity to leave their posts or play hockey with parcels.

Woolliams, who said the breakage rate of parcels is 60 per cent, called for an independent team to be set up to study the situation in post offices across Canada.

Woolliams also said a petition containing 241 names was sent to Ottawa from Calgarians complaining about service.

'Can't Read French'

MONTREAL (CP) — The inscription: "Can't read French" on a letter addressed to an Ottawa lawyer and returned by the Post Office to the Quebec Bar Association, has raised the hackles of the Bar's communications director.

Leon Bedard said Tuesday he sent a letter of protest — addressed in French — to Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne last Thursday, but has not yet received a reply.

The original letter, one of hundreds sent to Bar members in Quebec and outside the province, was addressed to Denis Dufour, a French-speaking Ottawa lawyer with the Consumers Association of Canada.

Bedard said the address was complete, including the postal code, except for "du Canada" (of Canada) in the association's name.

The letter was returned stamped: "Addresse incomplete" and "Inconnu" (unknown). "Can't read French" had been added in handwriting.

Homosexual Newspaper Cleared Of Obscenity

TORONTO (CP) — Three employees of Body Politic, a newspaper for homosexuals, and the newspaper's publishing company were acquitted today of charges of using the mails to distribute indecent, immoral or scurrilous material.

Pink Triangle Press, company president Ken Popert, 31, treasurer Gerald Hannon, 34, and secretary Edward Jackson, 33, were charged after the publication of an article describing sexual relations between men and young boys.

In a 45-page judgment, Provincial Judge Sydney Harris said he found the article, written by Hannon, to be a plea for understanding.

Although he personally was appalled by the article, he had to regard it with objective concern for the right of free discusson, the judge added.

The controversial trial, which ended Jan. 16, prompted rallies involving pro- and anti-homosexual groups, despite agreement between the Crown and defence that neither homosexuality nor pedophilia were on trial.

The article appeared in the December, 1977-January, 1978 issue and the charges were laid more than a year ago when police raided the newspaper's offices.

During the five-day trial, a rally in support of Body Politic was held in Toronto and Mayor John Sewell won vigorous applause when he told the crowd of about 600 that anyone not interested in the issues did not have to read the paper.

He declined to appear at a subsequent anti-homosexual rally which attracted about 700 supporters, saying his appearance would do nothing to reduce tensions.

In court, defence lawyer Clayton Ruby called the prosecution itself a crime while Crown Attorney Jerome Wiley argued that the article counsels buggery and gross indecency — indictable offences under the Criminal Code of Canada.

Clearance Denied

OTTAWA (FP) — A government security manual obtained by The Journal says that a public servant can be denied top federal security clearance if the individual has "close" relatives living behind the Iron Curtain.

The manual, dated November 1973, and authorized for use by the security branch of the Department of Public Works also makes clear that a public servant can lose a top security clearance if he or she marries the "wrong person."

VEITCH
. . . not outdone

Mayor Mike Young and provincial Tourism Minister Elwood Veitch kissed a little old lady on the streets of Portland Tuesday and created a sensation.

The two officials, in Oregon for a tourist blitz promoting Victoria, were handing out daffodils to passers-by.

(See also Page 17)

When Young, wearing his chain of office, went up to the woman and handed her a daffodil, she commented that it was her birthday.

In a spontaneous act, Mayor Young kissed her. Not to be outdone, Veitch, who was dressed in top hat and formal suit, also kissed the woman.

The result was captured by a photographer for the Oregon Journal and created a wave of favorable publicity, Victoria chamber manager Brian Small said in a telephone interview from Portland today.

Small said it summed up the message of the 40 Victoria officials and businessmen who made the trip: Victoria is a city of love and hospitality.

"The woman was a little taken aback at first when she was approached by one man wearing a chain and another man in a top hat. But she was delighted to be kissed."

The Victoria delegation arrived in Portland Sunday and have since been working from 6 a.m. to midnight in a gruelling round of interviews, speeches and street promotions.

"It is exhausting but very exciting," Small said.

The statistics: The Victoria visitors handed out 2,500 daffodils, 9,000 packets of flower seeds, and held hatting ceremonies for four prominent Oregonians, including Gov. Victor Atiyeh. In turn both Mayor Young and Veitch were installed as Portland knights of the rose.

"Their ceremony is very formal while ours is humourous," Small said. "They made our people knights while we made them purveyors of love."

In addition, there were eight TV interviews, 12 radio interviews and several stories in Oregon newspapers.

Victorians addressed meetings of Rotary, Portland Chamber of Commerce and tourist groups.

Small reported that Victoria chamber president Mel Cooper got a standing ovation for a speech to 250 chamber presidents and managers on how to turn a city on to the idea of tourism.

The blitz was an annual event sponsored by the Victoria chamber. Victoria businessmen in the blitz were in Portland at their own expense. Most of them are in businesses related to the tourist industry.

Previous blitzes have been held in Seattle, Edmonton and Calgary.

FIREMEN TO AIR BEEF

Disgruntled Pat Bay airport firemen will meet in Vancouver Thursday with Transport Canada officials to discuss the firefighters' complaint that they are working too much overtime.

John Hart, regional representative for the Public Service Alliance of Canada, said today the meeting was arranged Tuesday after the union went public with their problem.

The 13 firemen threatened to refuse to work any overtime after midnight Friday.

There are two issues involved. One is the employees' claim they are working excessive amounts of overtime to provide fire protection for flights which arrive or take off outside their normal shifts. The other is an apparent communication problem between the airlines and the airport on when this special coverage is needed.

The firefighters work two nine-hour shifts, from 6 a.m. to 3 p.m. and 3 p.m. to midnight. They claim they have been called in early or asked to stay late too often recently because of delayed flights or special charter flights.

Steven Rybak, Transport Canada's public affairs manager in Vancouver, said Tuesday it doesn't appear the federal government will provide any more personnel.

As for the communication problem, Rybak said since the beginning of January there has been a move to tighten up the procedure whereby airlines notify the airport or the firemen if they are arriving or taking off outside the firefighters' normal shifts.

He Picked A Perfect Crash Site

If Martin Hart needed any replacement parts after his car was in a collision at View and Vancouver Tuesday all he had to do was roll down the window and place an order.

His car crashed into an auto parts store at 1128 Vancouver after being in collision with a car driven by H.S. Pringle of Nanoose Bay.

An estimated $5,000 in damages was done to Reynolds, Colgate and Barbour Ltd. when Hart's vehicle took out part of the store's wall.

Hart, of 404 Montreal, wasn't injured.

Pringle was treated at Victoria General Hospital for a cut on his head.

Get Cash

Federal grants under the New Horizons program have been awarded to three Victoria senior citizens groups.

The Options for Life Development group receives $5,380 to produce a 25 minute slide-tape program about aging.

The program will be available to schools, churches, service clubs, libraries and other groups by contacting John Duffie, 831 Dunsmuir.

Esquimalt Silver Threads will get $3,695 to continue publication of The Freelancer by the creative writing class. The group will also expand the carpet bowling program. Contact for the project is Madge Clarke, 1955 Oak Bay.

A senior musical variety group called the Golden-Aires receives $1,800 to continue concerts for the elderly and handicapped. Contact is Helen Richardson, 408-642 Agnes.

Conditional Okay for Fish Project

City council's parks committee Tuesday approved a proposed fisheries enhancement project at Thetis Lake provided the provincial Fish and Wildlife branch meets certain conditions.

The committee endorsed the branch's plan, which would supply additional water storage in lower Thetis Lake, if the province ensures:

— The cost of repairs to dams in the watershed is borne by the government;

— The water level in the lake is raised by no more than a foot;

— Work on the dams and spillways isn't started until September or October;

— Recreation comes before fish;

— All dam work is done to the satisfaction of the city engineer;

— There is no further pollution or development in the upper and lower Thetis Lake watersheds.

The last condition was asked because the province holds about 145 acres of land immediately to the west of the park and the city is concerned the land might be opened up to housing development.

Ald. Bob Wright said it is also important the agreement have the rider that gives recreation a priority over fish because otherwise conflicts might arise over whether the water level should be managed for fish or for swimming.

He said swimming is of prime importance on the lakes at present. But Wright added if that situation should change in the future, and fishing becomes first in recreation, then adjustments could be made at that time.

The committee approved the fish and wildlife proposal after city engineer John Sansom said repair work on the dams at the lake must be undertaken even if the fisheries project isn't approved.

Sansom said the water rights branch has informed the city the old dams need repair.

"We agree there is work required," said Sansom.

City parks administrator Cliff Bate told the committee the proposed one-foot increase in water levels on the lower lake will actually benefit swimming.

The proposal goes before council next week.

The project, if it goes ahead next fall, will see the extra stored water slowly released into Craigflower Creek over the summer months. It will help cutthroat trout and salmon fry survive the dry periods.

The fish and wildlife branch has launched a major rehabilitation program on the Gorge Waterway, into which Craigflower feeds.

'IT FELT LIKE we'd run over a bus,' an Edmonton armored car driver said after pulling away from a stoplight and leaving his rear wheels behind.

Parks Canada Pares Down Lake Louise Tourism Plan

CALGARY (CP) — Parks Canada officials have recommended a modest enlargement of facilities at Lake Louise in Banff National Park which would increase overnight capacity from 1,900 to 3,500 beds in the next 10 to 15 years.

Indian Affairs Minister Hugh Faulkner said this week that public hearings would begin next month on three plans for tourism development in the area. He said present facilities are inadequate.

Faulkner, who is responsible for national parks, said all three plans call for developments about one-quarter the size of the scheme contemplated in the early 1970s.

He said any development in the Lake Louise area, 160 kilometres northwest of Calgary, must be modest but must also be of high quality and include accomodation for those who are not wealthy.

Consultants have also urged an immediate program to relieve housing, traffic and visitor service problems in the region.

The consultants recommend that most of the development occur in the valley itself rather than at the ski hill or near the lake.

They favor the valley because it offers the potential of the least environmental impact along with the most efficient use of service such as local roads and sewage.

In a report, the consultants call for a bus shuttle from the valley floor to relieve traffic during peak summer periods. The area attracts 600,000 visitors during the summer and another 200,000 in the winter.

The report recommends that private automobile traffic to the lake should be eliminated eventually and replaced with either buses, a gondola system or a rail line from the valley floor.

The consultants propose to relieve a serious housing shortage in Lake Louise with a major staff housing development north of the village.

Parks Canada is attempting to control the housing supply to prevent the area from evolving into a full-fledged townsite such as Banff. The consultants suggest that residents should not be allowed to own their own homes and only people who need to work in the area would be allowed full-time accomodation.

The consultants also call for immediate action to clean up local pollution problems with the construction of a pipeline to carry sewage from Upper Lake Louise to waste treatment facilities and prevent discharges into Louise Creek.

BC Bank Case Goes to Trial

EDMONTON (CP) — The Bank of British Columbia and the accounting firm Coopers and Lybrand Ltd. went to trial in provincial court Tuesday on eight charges filed under the provincial Labor Act.

The bank and the accounting firm are charged with being employers who failed to pay wages, vacation pay and severance pay to workers at Swan Electric Ltd. and Petrochem Electric (1977) Ltd.

Income-Tax Evasion Appeal Fails

CALGARY (CP) — A bid by convicted income-tax evader Vern Myers to be freed from jail has been rejected by an Alberta Supreme Court justice.

Myers' application to have a two-year prison sentence quashed on two technicalities was dismissed by Mr. Justice F. H. Quigley, who ruled the matter could better be handled by an appeal court.

Myers was found guilty of evading taxes on more than $1.4 million personal and $878,000 corporate earnings.

Potash Corp. Faces Labor Charge

REGINA (CP) — The Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union (OCAW) has accused management of the provincially owned Potash Corp. of Saskatchewan mine at Rocanville, of interfering with employees' selection of a trade union.

An unfair labor practice charge filed by the OCAW also alleges Rocanville division management discriminated or interfered in attempts to form a trade union.

Farmer Fed Up with Manitoba Tel

BRANDON (CP) — An Oak River, Man., farmer says he's prepared to organize a campaign against the Manitoba Telephone System unless he gets better service from the Crown-owned utility.

Gordon Radcliffe told a hearing of the Public Utilities Board that it's almost impossible for him to make a call without incurring a long-distance charge.

Daily Caters to Edmonton Diners

EDMONTON (CP) — Diners at 35 city restaurants can browse through Edmonton's newest daily newspaper as they munch their lunches.

Noon News, an eight-page tabloid, is printed 10,000 copies at a time and aimed at patrons of 35 selected city lunch counters, said owner Walter Zicha.

Sask. Digs In on Yorkton Residence

YORKTON, Sask. (CP) — The city's community planning committee will recommend possible sites for a community training residence here, city council decided Monday.

Frank Bogdasavich, deputy minister of social services, said in a letter to council his department still plans to set up a community training residence here because "there is a strong need for such a facility in that geographic area."

The residence would house non-violent prisoners serving sentences of less than two years.

Don't Turn Up Your Nose At This $220,000 Home

GOODWOOD, Ont. (UPC) — To build Canada's first odorless home, Bruce Small and his family have literally tested almost every brick and board by nose.

"It was a lengthy process that took almost two years," Small laughs. "Not the most scientific way, but it's certainly the most practical.

"We went through 12 different mixes of plaster. There is little scientific information available. You have to resort to sniffing. If the material in question made me drowsy and I felt like falling asleep, we knew we definitely couldn't live with it."

Small, his wife, Barbara, and four-year-old daughter, Carolyn, suffer from a disease so rare that it doesn't even have a scientific name. They are allergic to everything from the odor of wood to the printer's ink on dollar bills.

Small estimates it will cost $220,000 for the 6,000-square-foot sanctuary for his family. He estimates another $180,000 was spent designing the house and testing and searching for replacements to standard construction materials. So far, he's paying for the whole project himself.

Small hopes eventually to market a refined, less-expensive version of his prototype. The Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation is considering his request for a construction subsidy.

Small says there are models similar to his in the United States, "but this is the first in Canada and the most advanced to date anywhere."

He's trying to persuade the department of public works to consider his home a model in the construction of federal office buildings. The most recent offices and homes are "horrible because they are sealed off from the outer air due to the emphasis on heat conservation," he says. So far federal officials have "just listened patiently."

The Smalls' dream home is constructed almost entirely of neutral materials. The shell was built from concrete and steel. The floors are made of a special strain of odorless maple.

The Smalls eventually chose plaster walls, made of pure plaster of paris and lime. They've been left bare. "Its a bit sterile," Small admits, but says after two years of testing no paint has been found that they can tolerate.

The National Research Council in Ottawa is running tests to try to come up with a tolerable paint mix.

The Smalls can't use wood panelling because they're allergic to both the wood and the glues used in lamination.

The house uses two ventilation systems. A large fan situated on the roof pulls air through the house and ventilates the spaces between walls where stale dust-laden air accumulates.

Each room also has its own independent ventilation duct equipped with purifying filters and a built-in hood to draw off fumes from electric appliances.

Bruce's wife, Barbara, plans to design much of the furniture using stainless steel frames and cotton fabric. Beds are a special problem, she says, since many mattresses are stuffed with synthetics and chemically treated against fire and mildew.

The third floor of the house will have a special ecological wing where patients with extreme allergic conditions can spend a few days in a comparatively pure environment. Dr. John Maclennan, an allergist in Hamilton, Ont. and Dr. Doris Rapp of Buffalo, N.Y. — an activist in the allergics' cause — are already lining up patients.

The home is expected to be completed this spring.

Just how many people are affected by extreme allergic conditions is not known. Dr. Maclennan says the number is growing and recent research by U.S. doctors indicates hard-core allergics may make up as much as 20 per cent of the population.

Mrs. Small, 30, was unaware of her condition until three years ago. "I used to walk into a room full of people and suddenly feel like throwing up. I would go to the supermarket and feel overcome by drowsiness. I thought I was going crazy."

Reactors Planned

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — The Argentine government has approved plans to build four additional atomic reactors by 1997 at a cost of $4.5 billion.

BBC Is Cleaning Up Its Act

LONDON (CP) — Driven by angry letters and protests from viewers and listeners, the government-owned British Broadcasting Corporation has ordered a clampdown on bawdy sex, excessive violence and bad language in programming.

A committee of producers led by Monica Sims, head of the BBC's Programs for Children, has ordered a revision of existing guidelines on the portrayal of violence on the home screen.

And even tougher restrictions are being imposed on the use of bad language.

A repeat of the controversial TV play Gotcha has been banned by director-general Ian Trethowan as part of the new clean-up campaign. And from now on, no four-letter word can be used in a BBC production without the go-ahead from Trethowan.

"This doesn't mean we are losing our nerve," he says, "but the fact is things are said and done in the theatre and the cinema which should not be attempted on TV programs which go into millions of homes."

The clean-up is considered a victory for housewife Mary Whitehouse, who for years has campaigned against obscenity and violence in all fields of British entertainment.

London theatre managers believe there is a gradual swing away from bawdy sex and off-color language on the stage.

"People are getting tired of it," the manager of a leading West End playhouse observes. "At first it was a novelty — a swing away from the old Victorian taboos when even childbirth couldn't be mentioned in a play. Then we got to the point where four-letters were thrown in just for effect.

"We put on a detective thriller in which some very bad language was used. Yet the most successful detective-story playwright, Agatha Christie, never used a single swear word. And her play The Mousetrap has been running in London for 25 years."

The manager of a London music hall says Canadian visitors sometimes are shocked by the "blue" jokes they hear from British comedians.

"A man from Toronto told me he would not have taken his wife to our show if he'd known we allowed disgusting sex jokes. I apologized but pointed out that off-color jokes have always been traditional in British music halls.

"In the old days, of course, men did not take their wives and sweethearts to music halls. All that changed when women started wearing uniforms."

THIEF BOOTED IT

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A man who broke into a home wearing only a pair of women's knee-high black boots was sentenced to six months in prison when he appeared in county court here.

Cecil Boyle, 20, of nearby Langley was convicted of breaking and entering. County court Judge L. M. McDonald said he sentenced Boyle to prison because the offence was committed while Boyle was on probation.

The resident of the house testified that he awoke last Sept. 10 to see an almost-naked man searching through his trousers which were hanging in the bedroom.

Judge McDonald suggested that Boyle seek pyschiatric treatment.

U.K. Loan Rates Up 1%

LONDON (Reuter) — Major British banks Tuesday raised their interest rates on loans to 13.5 per cent from 12.5 per cent, tightening up on credit but not by quite as much as was expected.

Last week, the Bank of England raised its minimum lending rate to 14 per cent, up 1.5 per cent, in a move to control the money supply and curb inflation in the face of widespread strikes for more pay and a surge of borrowing.

Financial circles had anticipated that major banks would follow the central bank exactly, but National Westminster's chief executive Jeffrey Benson said in a statement:

"In reaching our decision to hold the increase to one per cent we were influenced by the financial problems many of our industrial customers are having to bear as a result of the extreme weather conditions and industrial disputes."

$24.6M Urban Funding

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal and provincial governments have announced a five-year, $24.6-million agreement on improving railway crossings, energy conservation programs and other urban projects.

Some funds from urban transportation assistance agreement, signed by federal Transport Minister Otto Lang and provincial Highways Minister Alex Fraser, will go towards building new railway crossings and improving old ones.

The new agreement, effective from April, 1978, to March, 1983, is the 10th to be negotiated with the provinces and territories.

For the first time, the funding will apply to grade crossings for provincially-operated lines such as B.C. Rail and B.C. Hydro tracks, as well as Canadian National Railways and CP Rail.

The bulk of the $24.6 million is expected to handle B.C.'s railway grade crossing requirements for five years but some of the money may be diverted into urban transportation or energy conservation although specific projects have not been announced.

Jupiter Solar System's Most Exciting Planet

By THOMAS O'TOOLE
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The planet Jupiter is 12 times the size of the Earth, has a gravity so strong it supports no fewer than 14 moons and an atmosphere so violent its 250-mile-an-hour winds feed no fewer than 10 visible hurricanes on any given day.

The planet's distinctive feature is a permanent hurricane called the Great Red Spot that covers an area as large as the Earth.

So powerful is Jupiter's magnetic field that it has trapped enough cosmic radiation to destroy every living thing on Earth. This radiation is trapped inside Jupiter's magnetosphere, which itself is the biggest "thing" in the solar system. If Jupiter's magnetosphere were shining instead of being an invisible force, it would appear to us on Earth as big as the sun even though it's five times farther away.

Jupiter is so big it's still shrinking from the explosion that created the planet 4.6 billion years ago, producing in its collapse today as much heat as it gets from the sun. Spinning on its own axis once every 10 hours, Jupiter rotates faster than any other planet, generating its own radio noise, producing a planetary "wind" like the solar wind and causing such striking electrical storms they can be heard by radio telescopes on Earth. No matter how it's sized up, Jupiter is the most compelling planet in the solar system.

Drawing nearer every day to this compelling giant is an 1,800-pound spacecraft named Voyager, whose cameras and instruments promise the deepest single probe of a planet in history. Less than 30 million miles away right now, Voyager is due to reach Jupiter on March 5 and whip so close by the planet that the craft should have a full view of Jupiter out one side and a full view of its moon, Io, out the other side. By the time Voyager passes beyond Jupiter, it will have gathered more information about a single planet than all the planetary spacecraft that have flown before it.

Voyager's statistics are almost as impressive as Jupiter's. Three times bigger than the two Pioneers that flew by Jupiter before it, Voyager carries four times as much instrumentation as Pioneer. More important, Voyager will gather information and send it back to Earth at 100 times the rate Pioneer did and 10 times better than any planetary spacecraft that's ever flown.

So technologically superior is Voyager that it heard Jupiter's radio noise three months ago, when it was almost 100 million miles away. One Voyager instrument felt the stir of the Jovian magnetic field, another saw evidence of the chemicals in its atmosphere. Voyager took its first picture of Jupiter last month, when the planet was 52 million miles away. The picture was better than anything Pioneer took except for the few frames it got in the last 24 hours of its flight past Jupiter.

By the end of January Voyager will have taken hundreds of zoom pictures of five different slices of the planet covering its entire 360 degrees. Every two hours, the cameras will see another fifth of the planet so that by the time Jupiter makes a 10-hour revolution the entire planet will have been photographed and a new sequence begun. This way, any change in the planet's atmosphere will show up on Voyager film.

Change is more common on Jupiter than anywhere in the solar system. The face of the planet is striped by 18 different regions, divided into white-colored zones and dark-hued belts. No two zones are alike, no two belts are alike. The white zones are the highest and coldest, like clouds on Earth except they're made of ammonia instead of water ice. The dark belts are thought to be heavier chemicals like sulfur and phosphorous seeking a lower level than the ammonia clouds.

Both the zones and the belts drift, come together and often dissipate into nothing. At times, they're polkadotted over with white or dark-colored whirls, which are little more than hurricanes the size of North America swirling about at the tops of the clouds. Winds at the edges of the belts and zones blow at 250 miles an hour, usually in the opposite direction.

Why is that? One theory is that Jupiter's internal heat is enough to supply warmth to its poles, meaning there need be no mechanism to transport heat from the planet's equator to its poles. That being so, the equatorial heat moves laterally across the planet, setting an example for the rest of Jupiter and dividing the planet into its striped belts and zones.

About the only thing that's stable on Jupiter is the Great Red Spot, but even it shrinks and grows and strays from its usual place in the South Tropical Zone. But it's been there like a sore thumb for more than 300 years, ever since it was first observed in telescopes.

"The Great Red Spot may be nothing more than a huge whorl embedded in the top of the zone like a huge ball bearing," said Voyager project scientist Ed Stone. "But the point is . . . what's the energy source that keeps it going? Where does the energy come from? Why doesn't it dissipate itself?"

For most of February the cameras on Voyager will take a lapsed time sequence to show Jupiter's rapid rotation. Some scientists think the planet keeps its stripes because Jupiter's rapid spin won't let the stripes change. The ammonia at the tops of the zones tries to move north or south and it's deflected back in by the planet's spin. Same thing with the darker chemicals in the belts.

"If we can image the planet enough times, we should see material flowing from the centre of the zones toward the edges," Stone said. "That would confirm the idea that there is this strange convective pattern going on."

When Voyager reaches Jupiter in March, it will sail between the planet and its largest moon, Io, and therein will lie a whole new story.

While only a moon, Io may be the strangest object in the solar system. Io is the only one of Jupiter's 14 moons to have a solid surface. But what a solid surface.

In recent years telescopes have seen clouds of sodium, sulfur and potassium sputter off Io's surface. A cloud of hydrogen wraps around it, like some nebulous cloak. For awhile, all of these sputtering clouds remained a mystery — until scientists realized that Io is in the midst of the most intense radiation that Jupiter's magnetic field has trapped.

"These things are literally being mined off the surface of Io by the radiation," Stone said. "If you do some simple calculations, you figure that metres of Io's surface must have been eroded away by this process."

Stranger still is the "flux tube" that connects Io with the tops of Jupiter's clouds more than 170,000 miles away. As Io moves through the strongest part of the Jovian magnetic field, it generates an electric potential the same way electricity is generated in a car's engine.

Freeze-Dried Process Used To Save Books

SUNNYVALE, Calif. (AP) — The wisdom of the ages is being freeze-dried like coffee in an attempt to rescue 40,000 waterlogged library books.

The volumes are going through a transformation that makes them hard as a rock, then brittle as potato chips, then — it is hoped — ready to go back on the shelves.

As part of the process, each book is spending a few days in a vacuum chamber that was used to test the lunar land rover.

The books were soaked last Nov. 4 when the water main serving Stanford University's library ruptured. Most of the flooded volumes were works of philosophy, religion and other humanities, but some rare 17th-century miniatures were also soaked, as was a collection of Time magazines.

The soggy books were rushed to commercial freezers so they would not mould. They stayed there until a dozen Stanford employees and volunteers removed the first 5,000 books from the freezers, unpacked them from cardboard crates and lined them up on shelves put up in a vacuum chamber at Lockheed Missiles and Space Co. here.

Officials at Lockheed say freeze-drying books is a first for them. They're doing the work free of charge, and they say it's costing them $50,000.

Lockheed officials estimate it may take them two months to dry out all 40,000 books, at 5,000 a week.

In the vacuum chamber, the books will be heated at temperatures from 25 to 50 degrees Celsius in a 60-hour process. The moisture that has been in them since the flood — and almost all other moisture — will be sucked from the pages.

By the time they're removed, they will be "as brittle as potato chips," said Sally Buchanan of Stanford.

Then the books will rest, undisturbed, for a few weeks in an empty school gymnasium in Palo Alto, while they absorb enough atmospheric moisture to permit ordinary handling.

VOLCANO HYDRO SOURCE

SUJIYA, Japan (Reuter) — The Japanese plan to turn a huge volcanic area known as the Inferno into a kind of earthly tea kettle.

Not to make Japanese green tea, but to generate electricity.

The Japanese historically have been convinced that their national survival depends on the continued supply of raw materials — of which they have few — from abroad.

They have been particularly concerned about oil because they import all their needs.

The Japanese went to war after the United States imposed an oil embargo in 1940, and the 1973 oil crisis provided a shock still felt in the national fibre.

At present, more than half of Japan's power plants are fueled by oil, although the government recently decided to ban their construction by 1986.

Now Japan is scrambling to find alternate sources of energy and diversifying sources of oil to reduce the chances of being ruined by a cutoff in oil supplies.

At Sujiya, near the centre of Japan's southernmost main island of Kyushu, government and private energy officials plan to tap steam and hot water trapped under volcanic mountains to make electricity.

Already Japan's biggest geothermal power plant, located at Hatchobaru at the foot of Mount Kurowa near here, is producing about 27,000 kilowatts.

Testing is under way prior to the construction of a second geothermal plant, while scientists and engineers involved in the project envision heating water in volcanoes in the future to provide steam for electricity generation.

Geological investigations are under way in a 77-square-mile earthquake-prone area of hot springs and geysers known to power development officials as the "treasure-house of geothermal power."

The engineers hope that the world's first full-scale geothermal power station drawing from deep underground wells will begin operation by 1990 and will be capable of generating between 200,000 and 300,000 kilowatts.

"Deep underground under the crust of this region there is a vast source of energy," say Hojun Konomatsu, a planning official.

"We plan to develop this area for general electricity purposes."

But there are engineering problems that so far the researchers have not been able to solve.

For one thing, the hot water pumped up from the four wells at Hatchobaru contains so much calcium that the pipes progressively become plugged with scaling.

As a result the plant, which is rated at 50,000 kilowatts, is operating at only half capacity.

"We have spent 13 billion yen ($67 million) and we have not fulfilled our maximum capacity," says Yoshido Yamashita, head of the station.

Despite the technical problems, and the fact that the cost of the initial installations is high, the government plans to build enough geothermal power plants over the next 10 years to generate 540,000 kilowatts.

This would be about three times the present capacity of 168,000 kilowatts derived from the six geothermal plants in the country.

To help develop more efficient and less costly equipment for extracting the steam and hot water, Japan signed a long-term agreement with the United States last year which provides for a pooling of geothermal technology.

Now China, which has new diplomatic links with both the United States and Japan, has asked for Japan's co-operation in the development of technology for the use of geothermal energy.

Mozambique: Church Crisis

By DAVID B. OTTAWAY
Washington Post

MAPUTO, Mozambique — The church and state in Mozambique, close allies in colonial times and thus estranged after independence, appear to be on the verge of an open confrontation.

The crisis, brewing since early November, suddenly has surfaced with the forced closing of 15 Catholic mission churches, one Nazarene and three Presbyterian churches and the Anglican cathedral in gaza Province just north of the capital.

Catholic bishops, in a letter to the government, have complained about the closings as well as the recent confinement of all missionaries in northernmost Cabo Delgado Province to the coastal town of Pemba.

The Catholic hierarchy seems to fear that freedom of religion, guaranteed by the constitution, is seriously threatened. But officials of the ruling Frelimo party say this is nonsense and that the real issue is the refusal of the powerful Catholic church to redefine its once privileged role to fit into an independent, Marxist-oriented Mozambique.

"I hope we can find a modus vendi with the party," said Catholic Archbishop Alexandre Dos Santos in an interview at his residence." I don't think they will go so far as to close down the church altogether."

"What the church has to do," said a Frelimo official, "is to decolonize itself and adjust to the new realities of Mozambique."

Under Portuguese colonial rule, the Catholic church was an extremely powerful political institution with a membership of 1.6 million. It also ran most of the schools and hospitals available to the African population in the countryside, giving it additional influence there.

Frelimo partisans who led the struggle for Mozambique's independence, achieved in 1975, found the Catholic church and colonial government together in their staunch opposition to the nationalist cause. They have never forgiven the Catholic church for this and Frelimo's Marxist leaders are now squaring off against it on ideological grounds.

In addition to the large Catholic following, there are said to be 1 million Moslems and 500,000 Protestants out of a total population of around 12 million.

The Catholic churches closed by Frelimo in January were all located on large mission stations that include schools, hospitals and living quarters for the clerics. There are scores of these stations thrughout the country and Catholic authorities say it is likely that most will be closed shortly.

A priest from one of the affected churches in Gaza Province said local party officials had forbidden him to hold services under the trees or in private residences. They had also told him permission would only be granted to build a new church miles from the present site, he said.

One top Frelimo party official said, however there was no intention of outlawing worship under the trees and that the crackdown was limited to those churches located on mission sites where the state had already taken over schools and hospitals.

The situation is confused. While some missionaries are being imprisoned or expelled on charges of immoral conduct, others are being granted visas to come work here.

The confusion began last November with a blistering attack by President Samora Machel on the role of the Catholic establishment and other religious groups in colonial times.

"The cross was never a weapon of the people. It was a colonial weapon. The cross blessed the whip of the administrator, the cannons of the colonial army and the planes that bombarded our people with napalm and destroyed our crops," he said in a speech to the nation.

"With the party, we are going to unmask religion and all other forms of obscurantism. What is religion for, to misdirect us? What are chuches for, to divide us?" he asked. "Our faith went to Rome, Mecca or England. It did not stay in Mozambique to fight colonialism.

"Religion," he concluded, "rejects light. It is an eternal night, without stars or moon."

Machel's outburst followed the party's discovery according to Frelimo officials that the Catholic church was actively organizing to oppose it and attempting in some instances to infiltrate local party cells.

The church was not long in responding. On Dec. 6, the nine Catholic bishops presented Frelimo with 21 grievances. The letter has not yet been made public but Catholic sources say their complaints concerned violation of human rights and lack of freedom of speech and religion.

Frelimo officials countered with charges of misbehavior by priests and missonaries. On Dec. 7, they say, the government was obliged to expel a Dutch priest, Gerald Van Der Heijden, who was accused of homosexual assault against a child in Cabo Delgado Province.

This apparently provoked the recall of all missionaries working in the province to Pemba, where they have been confined pending a national party decision on their activities there and elsewhere in Mozambique.

A second complaint related by party officials is that one Pentacostal missionary group had actually drowned several persons in the process of baptizing them in the sea.

A third is that many priests have secretly fathered children without taking responsibility for them and leaving Mozambican mothers to bring them up.

"We both have our list of grievances," remarked one top Frelimo official, "but the fundamental problem is that the church simply has not found its proper role in our new society."

VIRUS WITHOUT CURE

ROME (UPI) — Health authorities said today an official diagnosis has confirmed the disease that has killed at least 65 infants in southern Italy is a syncytial virus, for which there is no known cure.

The medical ruling came from Professor Francesco Pocchiari, director of the Italy's Higher Institute of Health, during a meeting with seven international virus experts, including three from the United States.

Pocchiari said the infant deaths were caused "by a respiratory virus, with high incidence of the syncytial strain."

His conclusion confirmed a diagnosis made two weeks ago by Dr. Giulio Tarro, one of Italy's most noted virus experts who has been at odds with Naples physicians over medical procedures used to identify the disease that has killed babies in southern Italy, all but one in the Naples area.

The syncytial virus strain, discovered by a U.S. researcher 20 years ago, usually strikes infants less than a year old. A vaccine has been developed to treat the virus, but it is still in the experimental stage and not available for general use.

Italian health officials were joined Monday by three American medical experts called in to find a cure for the virulent sickness.

DEFECTOR SEIZED

ROME (AP) — Police say they have arrested a man suspected of being a Red Brigades defector who says he can identify the men who organized the kidnapping and killing of former premier Aldo Moro.

This 'Temple' Short on Choir Music

SEATTLE (AP) — You won't find altars, candles or choir music inside the Venusian Church.

Instead, there are 30 closet-like rooms where, for 25 cents, church members can watch three-minute pornographic films.

"Sex is a part of most religions but most treat it as negative," said Rev. Ronald Petersen, who founded the church. "I want to make things sex-positive."

Petersen said his movie arcade, wedged between a tavern and an adult bookstore, is a religious temple. Anyone who watches a movie, with titles such as Blow Me a Kiss and Sock It to Me, Love, is considered a church member.

Sexually-explicit movies have value, Petersen said. He said mental health workers send clients to the arcade to work out sexual hangups.

Petersen's religious beliefs were the object of two recent court disputes. He was charged with 1977 and 1978 violations of Seattle's peep show ordinance.

The law says movie viewing booths must remain unlocked, patrons in booths must be visible from the waist down and adequate lighting must be provided for easy police surveillance.

Petersen contends the law violates his congregation's religious privacy. He has refused to take down the full-length doors.

"The law is dehumanizing and promotes shame and guilt and holds my church members up to ridicule and discomfort," he said. "Crimes aren't committed from the waist down."

In a Seattle Municipal Court case on the charges, the non-profit Interfaith Foundation founded by Petersen was fined $100 on each of eight counts.

Despite the courtroom defeats, Petersen continues to promote his beliefs, radiating an almost boyish enthusiasm for what some who know him call "born-again porn."

Petersen said he earns $500 a week from the foundation, but would not elaborate on other income. He said the Venusian Church once had a membership of 5,000 persons in the Tacoma and Seattle area but his present mailing list is 1,500.

Why Do Women Keep Puffing?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A scientist who worked on the new smoking and health report suggests women may find it especially hard to quit smoking because of conflicts arising from their new life styles.

"Why women have more trouble quitting (than men do) is not clear," said Dr. Norman Krasnegor, a behavioral researcher in the National Institute on Drug Abuse.

But, in an interview with UPI, Krasnegor offered what he stressed was some informed "speculation" on that point.

"Women started smoking later in life and later historically than men," he said.

Research indicates American men took up smoking in a big way during the social upheavals introduced by the First World War, while women generally did not follow suit until after the Second World War.

Now, said Krasnegor, "young women — and in particular adolescent women — are smoking at a rate much higher than their male cohorts.

"We are not sure whether this represents girls catching up with boys or whether they will surpass them. It may, in fact, be simply that there is a general change with respect to female behavior and risk taking.

"Girls, in order to catch up, have to work faster."

Although that may explain why the number of women smoking remains relatively static in the face of a decline among men, why is it harder for women to quit than men?

The new surgeon general's report, just published, which said "cigarette smoking is even more dangerous . . . than was supposed," indicated women do have more trouble quitting.

"There is fragmentary evidence," it said, "suggesting that the abstinence syndrome is more severe in women than in men."

"It may be," said Krasnegor, "that women are less likely to give it up because it is just new to them."

And there may also be a vanity factor, he said.

"When people stop smoking there are all sorts of withdrawal symptoms," Krasnegor continued, such as blood pressure changes, irritability and weight gain.

This, he said, leads to the "weird" finding that "women on the one hand recognize the health risks, but, because of concerns about personal appearance, refuse to give up smoking because it might make them fat."

He said a woman might think, "'The hell with this. If I'm going to have to gain weight to quit smoking, I'll just keep smoking and stay slim.'"

Krasnegor said it is also true, however, that women are joining men in the exercise wave, and learning that quitting smoking leads to better fitness.

What is needed, he said, are "new experiments" specifically pinpointed on women.

ROBBERY A RECORD

AUCKLAND (AP) — Two men assaulted a security guard today and escaped with a post office payroll of $278,346 ($315,143 U.S.) in what police said was the biggest robbery in New Zealand's history. The raid took place in the heart of Auckland, New Zealand's largest city. Two men, one armed with a baseball bat and the other with a gun, attacked security guards, grabbed two boxes full of money from a trolley and escaped in a car, police said.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 NT	Pass	3 NT

Opening lead — five of diamonds.

This deal occurred in a team of four match. At the first table, South got to three notrump and West led a diamond, declarer winning East's jack with the queen. Declarer could see seven winners and needed two more for his contract. His best source for additional tricks was in the heart suit, so he led the ten and let it ride when West followed low.

Had West held the queen, South would have made the contact; in fact, he would have made an overtrick. But East took the ten with the queen and returned a diamond West's diamonds thus became established and declarer utimately went down one.

The bidding and opening lead at the other table were exactly the same, but here declarer made the contract. South won the diamond lead with the queen, led a spade to dummy's queen, and returned a low heart. East followed low, as most players would do, and South played the ten. West ducked in order to preserve his entry, but it availed him naught.

Declarer led another heart, West playing low again, but South — having already located the queen — went up with the king, felling east's queen. Another heart lead forced out the ace and South made four notrump.

Despite the unusual nature of the second declarer's method of play, it had an extremely sound foundation. South didn't mind losing a trick to the queen if West had it, since West would be unable to make a damaging return. Declarer's only real concern at the start was that East might win the first round of hearts with the queen and return a diamond through the A-10 — and he tried to prevent this from happening.

In effect, South assumed that East had the queen. There was an excellent chance, if this was the case, that East would not play it if the first heart lead came from dummy.

SOLUTIONS THURSDAY

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, February 15 By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21 - April 19): Take conservative course. The law figures in a more prominent way than usual. Check sources, take nothing for granted. Be positive about quotes, rights, permissions — and potential. Accept more responsibility — and get promises in writing.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20): Moderate pace is best — know it and act accordingly. Obtain hint from Aries message. Accent on special services, employment, health and ability to "close a sale." One at a distance aids in gaining you wider recognition.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20): Lunar aspect points to charisma, change, speculation, romance and children. You can be direct — and get results. Eliminate red tape. Get to heart of matters. Stress independence, originality. Welcome chance for new start. Member of opposite sex thinks you are marvelous!

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): Emphasis on what is solid as contrasted to flimsy. Stick to familiar ground; be familiar with track records, past performanes. An older, "formidable" individual could become a wonderful ally.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): Humor, versatility stand as staunch assets, especially when dealing with stubborn relatives. Know it, act accordingly — mail, telephone messages figure prominently. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons play key roles.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): If you pay attention to details, you might hit jackpot. Check sources. Accent on possessions, missing links, locating lost articles and income potential. Aquarius, Scorpio persons figure prominently — so does the number 4.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): Take less — Moon in your sign should coincide with confidence, initiative, correct timing, accurate judgment and a special kind of "attractiveness." You get reprieve — you wipe slate clean of past mistakes. This can be one of those rare times, when you are ripe for progress.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): Your natural abilities surge to forefront. Courage of convictions, over coming fears, doubts — these are spotlighted. Financial gain indicated if you are confident and discreet. Business venture will be subject of favorable news.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): Accent on bringing priorities into line, returning a favor, enlarging circle of friends. Give attention to program of resolutions and public relations. Pisces, Virgo — and the number 7 — figure in scenario. One close to you demonstrates "psychic ability."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): You learn what must be done to preserve momentum. You discover site of goal — you get down to business and you can prove a major point. Those who "pull strings" are willing to make room for you at top.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Views are vindicated. Your perception of potential is on target. You gain needed information. One at home or hospital is a staunch ally. Know it and show some extra consideration. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio figure prominently.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20): Dig deep — get to heart of matters concerning credit, percentages, financial expectations of partner, spouse. You may be concerned with event that smacks of the occult. Be thorough in checking, be aware of statistical possibility of coincidence.

IF FEBRUARY 15 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are intelligent, perceptive, possess a social conscience and an unusual voice. You appreciate art, luxury and "fabulous" desserts. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons play key roles in your life. You get chance for fresh start in March. In October, you reap financial benefits of past efforts. This is to be a year during which you learn that being alone is not always akin to being lonely. You learn to face situations as they are, not merely as you wish they could be. You grow in spiritual sense. You could feel deep attraction of love. You are preparing for happiness. The sky can be the limit if you define terms, if you come to terms, if you learn and live.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"Let's split the total evenly, a third each," said Peter. "It's only pennies difference anyway."

Mike smiled. "Well, your bill was just three bucks, but that's okay by me as I'll save 66 cents."

"I'm happy," Charlie declared, "It'll cost me a dime extra."

So that's the way it is. What's the total amount?

Loretta Countrifies Sissy

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — Loretta Lynn, the petite country singing star, was handed 25 glossy portraits of film actresses two years ago and asked to find a prospect to portray herself in a movie biography.

Loretta set aside the photograph of Sissy Spacek, saying, "That's the coal miner's daughter right there."

Sissy is red-haired, freckled and round-faced. Loretta is a thin-faced brunette with high cheekbones. But Loretta was right on target.

Four years ago her autobiography, Coal Miner's Daughter detailed the crushing poverty of her childhood in Butcher Hollow, Ky., and her struggle to succeed as a country singer.

The book became a best-seller with sales of more than 135,000. The paperback sold more than a million copies in six weeks.

Universal Pictures bought the movie rights and began a search for an actress to play Loretta from age 13, when she was married, until the present.

Loretta, a spunky, down-home mountain woman who speaks her mind, said, "I told them from the start Sissy was the only one, even though I never saw her in a show. I don't go to picture shows so I never saw the others either.

"But they said Sissy didn't look like me. They tested a bunch of others. And I told 'em they was wasting thousands of dollars. And they was.

"In some ways Sissy looks like me. We both have blue eyes. And she LOOKS country like I do. Turned out she ACTS country, too."

Last year Loretta was surprised to find Sissy waiting for her in the wings when she came off stage at a Louisiana concert.

"The minute I laid eyes on her I said, 'You're Sissy,'" Loretta recalled. "We got along like old friends. We talked to a psychic woman in Ohio who told us we'd been together in past lives four different times. And I believe her."

Universal screened Carrie, for which Sissy won an Oscar nomination in 1976, and Loretta insisted no one else would be right for the part. Sissy could easily be made to look 13 and was willing to do all the singing.

Earlier this year Sissy and Loretta spent a week together in Nashville, Tenn., near Loretta's home. Sissy learned bits and pieces of 16 of Loretta's best-known songs for the role.

At the end of the week, Loretta made an appearance on Grand Ole Opry. Sissy watched from the wings. Then, unexpectedly, Loretta announced Sissy would portray her in Coal Miner's Daughter and called her out on stage.

"She was scared to death," Loretta said, grinning. "She wouldn't budge. But my husband, Mooney (for moonshine), pushed her out just like he did me when I was first starting.

"I handed Sissy the microphone and she froze. Anyhow, I sang the verse of Fist City and then she finally sang the chorus. People listening to the radio thought it was me doing an encore.

Public Notice

Ottawa, February 7, 1979

TO ALL RADIO AND TELEVISION LICENSEES

Federal General Election Procedural Guidelines

In the expectation that writs for a Federal General Election will probably be issued in the forseeable future, the Commission wishes to inform all broadcasters that the procedural guidelines released on April 20, 1978, are those recommended to be followed in order to meet the political advertising requirements of the registered political parties. They result from the requirements of the Canada Elections Act as described in the CRTC Public Announcement of February 2, 1978.

It should be noted that these are not just CRTC Guidelines. They are the result of many meetings of an Ad Hoc Committee which was set up to develop such operating procedures. This committee consists of representatives of political parties represented in the House of Commons, broadcasters, including the CAB, CBC, CTV AND TVA, the chief electoral officer and the CRTC. These groups have all accepted the guidelines and the Commission encourages all broadcasters to follow them.

Some minor modifications are being made to the April 20, 1978 guidelines but these do not affect their substance. A complete list of all election guidelines and procedures will follow shortly.

If you have any questions, please direct them to Bill Howard or Don Rheaume of the CRTC Legal Branch at (819) 997-4922. Other members of the CRTC Election Committee are Charles Tierney, Ralph Hart, Lorne Mahoney and Miss Gayle Jabour.

Before the Judge

Judge Harold Alder committed two 18-year-olds for higher-court trial following a preliminary hearing in provincial court Tuesday.

Wesley James Kennedy, 604 Wilson, and Kelly Norman Lambert, 2844 Rockwell, are charged with attempted murder, assault with intent to wound, maim or disfigure, and breaking and entering.

The charges stem from a Dec. 3 incident at 553 Raynor during which 83-year-old Julia Knoll was attacked.

The pair, represented by Chris Considine at the three-day hearing, had earlier elected trial by judge without jury.

Alder denied an application by Crown counsel Nicholas Lang to add a charge of robbery with violence.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Everett Frederick Court, 43, of Coquitlam, $500; Terry James Ridings, 28, of 2838 Adelaide, $500; James Gilbert Fullerton, 57, of 701 Esquimalt, $450; Scott Douglas Marshall, 23, of 2052 Grant, $450; Wolfgang Nitsch, 35, of 1325 Stanley, $400; Angelina Dickson, 36, of 540 Comerford, $350; David Marvin Norbury, 20, of 3125 Qu'Appelle, $50; and Douglas Owen Sinden, 17, of 1039 View, $50.

In addition, Norbury and Sinden were placed on six months' probation, Norbury was ordered to perform 100 hours of community service work and Sinden ordered to do 80 hours.

Two Jailed for Theft Of Esquimalt Sailboat

Two of the three young people who stole an $8,500 sailboat last month in Esquimalt were jailed Tuesday by Judge E.J.C. Stewart in county court.

The third was placed on probation for one year after getting a suspended sentence. All pleaded guilty to the Jan. 26 offence.

Steven James Swanson, 18, of Vancouver, was given six months definite and three months indeterminate at the young offender's unit of Oakalla.

Faith Ellen Barclay, 18, of Burnaby, was sentenced to 14 days and told she could expect to have revoked a conditional discharge she was granted after the same trio committed almost the same offence a month earlier.

Russell Archie McKinnon, 17, of Vancouver, was treated as a first-offender because he was a juvenile when the earlier offence was committed and a conditional discharge was granted.

Court was told the three came fron Vancouver by bus and ferry Jan. 24 and at 8:30 p.m. Jan. 26 went aboard the 22-foot fibreglas vessel Beginning, owned by Mr. and Mrs. George Cox, at West Bay Marina. They started its outboard auxiliary and cast off, heading for the Race Rocks area.

Next morning they went into Becher Bay Marina, bought gas, spent the day and night there and were still at the marina when police arrested them.

Swanson had been placed on probation for 12 months after the earlier offence.

"It's quite clear he doesn't understand the conditions of discharge," Stewart commented, noting there had been two previous periods of probation on Swanson's record.

It was an unusual case, the judge said, the like of which he had never had before and "certainly hope never to have again."

It could no longer be treated as a prank, he said.

The judge said it was a mistake last time not to take advice of the probation officer who recommended Swanson be sent to the young offender's unit.

"I chose not to adopt that recommendation and that's the reason you're all before me today."

Stewart said he gave McKinnon another chance only because he was a juvenile last time. Barclay and Swanson both failed to take advantage of the leniency, although he noted with respect to Barclay she came from an unfortunate background and did not enjoy the advantages other people have had.

15 Days in Jail For Having Drugs

Daryl Frederick Fife Wilson, 20, was sentenced Tuesday to a total of 15 days in jail when he pleaded guilty in county court to being in possession of cocaine and marijuana.

The Crown said Victoria and Saanich police searched Wilson's residence at 2526 Belmont on July 30 and found a cardboard box containing car parts and a pound of marijuana, and a vinyl case containing a small quantity of cocaine powder. Wilson was arrested the next day.

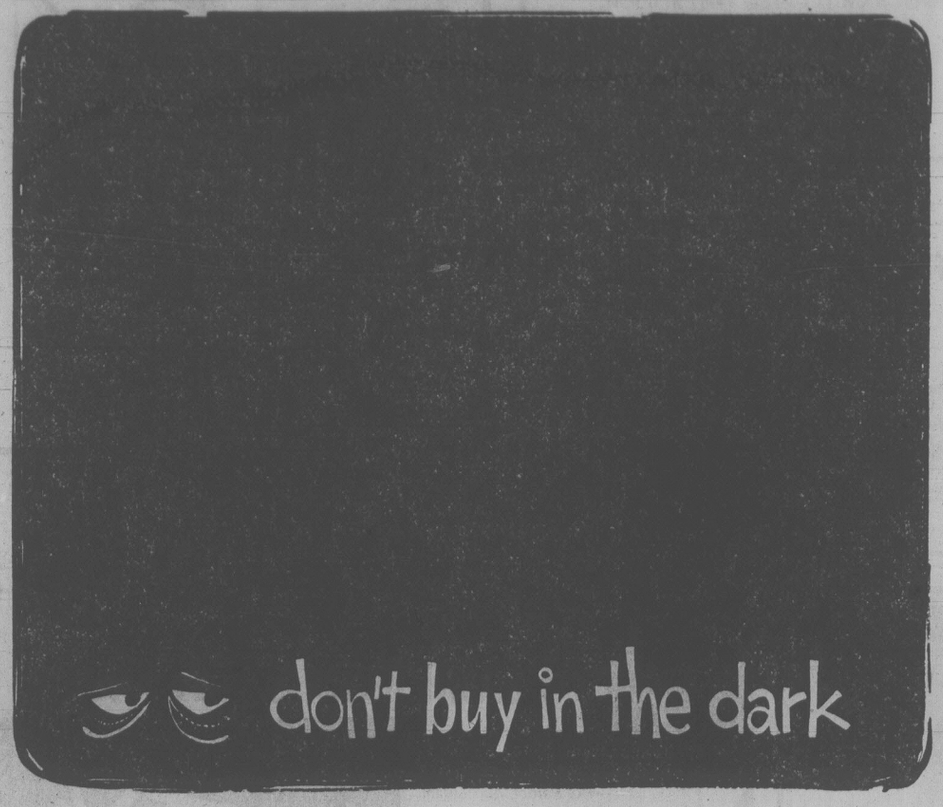

Although the accused had a previous conviction for possession of marijuana, defence counsel Patrick Sweeney said both drugs were for his own use. He asked for probation in view of Wilson's age and the fact that he was charged only with simple possession. Sweeney said a jail term would interrupt Wilson's self-supporting educational program.

Judge Peter Millward said he was considering Wilson's age, but also the previous conviction.

"I must consider the law as it is now and not as it may be some time in the future."

He sentenced Wilson to six days for being in possession of marijuana and 15 days on the cocaine count, to be served concurrently and intermittently on five consecutive weekends starting this week.

Saanich Ponders Charging For Removal of Car Parts

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier has been asked by council's bylaw enforcement committee to use his discretion in determining whether the municipality should make any charge for removing junk car parts from an elderly woman's property.

The committee was inclined to authorize the free removal after being told that the resident, Mrs. Bella Koban, 2950 Donald, was in difficult financial straits.

But the mayor said he was loath to approve the action without verifying the hardship question.

A.G. Reid, 4242 Springridge Crescent, appearing on behalf of Mrs. Koban, said she had complied with an order several years ago to remove an unsightly barn from her property.

But when the barn was demolished it exposed old car parts. The owner was subsequently charged for failing to remove them, Reid said, but sentence was suspended after she told the judge she would have difficulty paying the fine.

Several aldermen said the circumstances seemed to justify Saanich carrying out the work at no cost to the owner, on compassionate grounds.

Citing the recent controversy involving a concrete drainage basin built illegally on municipal land by the sons of Ald. Geoff Vantreight, Reid asked for an explanation as to "the different manner in which these two cases were handled."

Couvelier explained that the trespass issue was resolved after the Vantreights agreed to remove their offending structure.

Help Accepted On Layritz Work

Saanich council's parks and recreation committee has accepted with thanks an offer from the Victoria and District Baseball Association to provide cash and manpower for major improvements to the baseball facilities at Layritz Park.

The improvements include construction of a new building to house the concession, scorekeeping, a meeting room and storage, as well as moving the backstop for greater field depth.

Of the estimated $9,800 total cost, the association has offered to contribute $7,800 with Saanich providing the other $2,000.

'Village' Planning Starts

The Victoria chapter of the Children's International Summer Villages again will send a delegation overseas this year.

In previous years Victoria delegations have been to villages in Japan, Denmark, France, Sweden, Mexico and Italy.

It has not yet been decided which country the Victoria delegation will visit this year.

Villages, or camps, are held in many countries annually. Each delegation consists of two boys, two girls and an adult leader.

The selection program for the Victoria delegation begins Friday in the auditorium of Cloverdale elementary school, 3427 Quadra, from 7 to 9 p.m.

The program is open to any child whose 11th birthday is after Aug. 1, 1978, and not later than July 31, 1979.

The selection program will consist of three activity evenings with games, folk dancing and drama, ending with a weekend camp in May.

Application forms are available at elementary schools and at Cloverdale school on Friday evening. There is a $5 registration fee.

When the selection program ends everyone is invited to join the Junior Club, where they can continue with a variety of activities. Anyone over 11 can join the club.

KOOTENAY AT RECORD

NELSON (CP) — Kootenay Forest Products Ltd. today reported record net earnings of $3,896,000 during 1978 on record lumber and plywood sales of $28,650,000.

That performance compared favorably with net earnings after extraordinary items of $837,000 on sales of $21,522,000 in 1977.

Kootenay Forest Products is a subsidiary of the British Columbia Resources Investment Corp.

Wharf St. Park Threatened

A regional district waterfront park on Wharf Street is threatened by plans of developer Hans Hartwig for an office-retail complex in the area, regional directors were told today.

Capital Regional District board chairman Murray Glazier appointed former board chairman Jim Campbell and Sooke director Charles Perkins to appeal to Victoria council and the Provincial Capital Commission to have the development scaled down.

Hartwig's Diversified Holdings Ltd. plans to build a 90,000-square-foot complex between the Johnson Street Bridge and Hartwig Court.

Executive director Dennis Young told directors today the structure would leave users of the park — on the former site of the Oakland Industries plant — with only a tunnel view of the Inner Harbor. He said the park would be in shadow most of the day if the development is allowed to proceed on the proposed scale.

"We've got a duty there as an adjacent owner. The developer, of course, wants to maximise the use of his land," Glazier said.

"We, as the neighbors, ought to make our position known."

He noted that the regional district has already spent $45,000 on capital costs for the park and authorized $35,000 for landscaping.

The park is named Reeson Park after Gordon Reeson, who with former city mayor Peter Pollen donated the park to the regional district.

They had bought the site from Hartwig, the former owner.

Young was also asked today to proceed with the cancellation of a contract with Karin Hartwig, Hartwig's daughter, who was commissioned to create a drawing of how the park should be developed.

Young said she had not lived up to the appointment and failed to produce the drawing although the time limit of 21 days has expired.

GORDON HEAD

A unique and exciting, totally modern home belonging naturally to its open easy-care lot — 1.5 acres of gently sloping rock offering unobstructed views and sunshine with 355 ft. of waterfront NO — not a typical old Victoria mansion needing maids and gardeners, nor yet a huge new luxury home on a mini lot. This home is up to the minute modern with every luxury yet can be cared for with the greatest of ease. Every window has glorious sea and island views. The living room has a huge hooded fireplace and a 22 ft. ceiling. The master suite is really SOMETHING, but there are so many special delights. It will appeal to a purchaser who appreciates quality, one-of-a-kind living, genuine PRIVACY indoors and out, with easy access to the city. Price $400,000.

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

308 CARDS OF THANKS

WE DESIRE TO THANK OUR friends for their kindness, words of sympathy and donations to the Cancer Fund, on the loss of our mother and grandmother Doris E. Donnelly. — Eleanor Lord, Louise Wallis and families.

309 IN MEMORIAM

GILMORE—In loving memory of our beloved husband, dad and grandad John B. (Jack) Gilmore, who was taken from us so suddenly Feb. 14, 1977.
Two years ago we had to part,
With one we loved with all our heart,
The wound is deep, it will not heal,
Only those who have lost know how we feel.
Please God, forgive a silent tear,
Our silent wish that he were here,
Others are taken, yes we know,
But he was ours, and we miss him so,
Treasure him, Lord, in your garden of rest,
For here on earth, he was one of the best.
Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by wife Edith, Rick and Sandy, Sandy and Gary, Tim and Joyce, Grandchildren and Mrs. L. Hamilton.

MCNIECE— In loving memory of Anne McNiece and her sons Tommy, David and James, who were taken away from us Feb. 14, 1964
Ever remembered by Alice and Joe Gov and family, Helen and Willy Bettex and family.

IN LOVING MEMORY OF OUR dear sister Lillian W. Dunderdale who passed away February 14th, 1978.
And while she sleeps in peaceful sleep
Her memory we shall always keep.
Edith Davis and Evelyn Thomson.

IN LOVING MEMORY OF OUR dear Aunt and Great Aunt, Lillian W. Dunderdale, who passed away February 14th, 1978.
There is a link death cannot sever
Love and remembrance last forever.
Ken, Margaret, Alison and Christopher Messerschmidt.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUTE, SANDS

Make February Month for Ferns

GARDENING
hilda beastall

Ferns needing repotting for indoor home decoration can be a February project, for new fronds are now to be seen still curled on the crown of the plants. These are ferns not hardy enough for outdoor growing.

If the fern crown cannot be seep just above soil level, this may be one of the causes of failure with ferns. According to the type, a fern will have either a matted, dark- brown, rather hard crown, or light-brown, rather woolly runners almost on the soil surface.

Whichever kind you have, notice that the fronds, or leaves, are emerging from this crown. In nature, these crowns are not buried under soil but can be seen sheltered in winter by drifting tree leaves or dead fronds from the plant itself. In pots, we carefully clean off the dead stems to allow air and light to reach the crown.

If the present fern pot is the largest that you wish to give the plant and yet it needs repotting, there is a way out.

Water the plant and drain it; up-end the pot and tap rim on table edge to loosen. In a pail of water, wash much of the soil from the rootball and then repot into the same pot again.

The pot should be scrubbed and dried first, and the fresh soil prepared.

Do not make a fine mixture for ferns; it should be lumpy compost, coarse leaf-mould or coarse nursery-grind peatmoss, and coarse sand orsmall bits of charcoal, all mixed together.

A fern pot is traditionally half the height of a regular pot because ferns do not thrive in a mass of soil for their rather sparse root systems.

In the bottom of the pot, place an inch or two (for a deep pot) of coarse gravel and charcoal for drainage. This is important, for water must not remain for long periods at the roots of ferns. In a shallow pot, a half-inch of drainage will do to keep the soil from clogging the drainage holes.

When repotting, hold the plant upright in the pot with the crown just below the rim of the pot. Begin to fill in around the roots with the lumpy mixture, tapping the pot to firm the particles around the roots instead of ramming tight as with some other plants.

Continue filling until soil is just below the plant crown, leaving a space of a half to one inch for watering.

Give the plant a soaking to settle the soil and then allow to drain away the surplus.

Most ferns sold for house plants will grow in moderate light but rarely in either bright sunshine or a dark corner.

When need for watering is indicated by dry soil and a light weight to the pot as contrasted with its weight when newly soaked, fill the pot, slowly, to the rim and allow to drain into a saucer. After half an hour, empty remaining water. You will know the soil has retained all that it can hold without the roots being in free water. More water may not be needed for a week or 10 days, but checking must be done according to size of pot and general home conditions.

Overwatering and poor drainage are enemies of ferns in the home; another enemy is touching of the fronds (leaves) by humans or pets, even accidentally in passing.

Ferns love freedom. They will only thrive for us in the house if we respect their needs for freedom from complete drought, freedom from drowning and freedom from crowding. Given these freedoms, ferns make a lovely addition to window gardens.

Soviets Made Fun Of NHL: Senator

OTTAWA (CP) — An inquiry should be conducted into conditions, training and salaries of National Hockey League players following the humiliating 2-to-1 defeat in a three-game series with the Soviet Union national team, says Senator Martial Asselin.

"In future we will not be made fun of," said the Conservative Senator from Quebec.

Senator Asselin also criticized the federal government's recent offer to give four cities $18.5 million to expand arenas to NHL requirments.

Amateur sport should get that money, he said.

Senator Ray Perrault, government House leader, said the loss was "not the end of the world."

Canada had made great strides in international sport in the last 10 years, he said.

"There will be other hockey series and Canada will win its share of games."

'Commissars' Demoralizing Bureaucrats

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal civil servants are fearful of and demoralized by government efforts to control the bureaucracy through a system of what were termed commissars who report back to Prime Minister Trudeau's office, the Commons was told Tuesday.

Progressive Conservative Alvin Hamilton, a former cabinet minister, said public servants will no longer automatically vote Liberal because they resent the government's tactics.

Deputy ministers are being bypassed by the so-called commissars.

Priest Charged

MELBOURNE (AP) — An Australian Roman Catholic priest was brought into court on 11 charges of stealing from a church trust fund and ordered to appear again April 11. Rev. Brian Emmett Wallis appeared in the Melbourne city court Tuesday. He is charged with stealing $10,000 from the Melbourne diocese trust on Feb. 21, 1977 and 10 other counts involving $58,000, the police prosecutor said.

10-DAY REPRIEVE WON BY BHUTTO

RAWALPINDI (AP) — The hanging of former prime minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto was stayed by Pakistan's Supreme Court today for at least 10 days. His lawyer wanted at least 30 and argued heatedly with the chief justice before giving up.

The seven-man court now will review the 51-year-old politician's conviction and death sentence on charges of conspiring to murder political opponent Reza Ahmed Kasuri and assemble Feb. 24 to hear arguments by Bhutto's lawyer, Yahya Bakhtiar.

Bakhtiar said he will introduce new evidence to show that the government's key witness, Masud Mahmud, who headed the political police and was pardoned for turning state's evidence, had his own motive to kill Kasuri and that Bhutto was not part of the plot.

Kasuri escaped the ambush in 1974, but his father was killed.

Bakhtiar's petition also said the Lahore High Court which sentenced Bhutto argued for execution rather than life imprisonment because it claimed he was not a good Moslem, and that while the Supreme Court threw out this argument it did not reduce the sentence accordingly.

Bakhtiar, a former attorney-general, applied to the court for the review Tuesday, when the seven-day period allowed for appeals for executive clemency expired. Had the stay been refused, Bhutto would have been hanged Thursday.

Bakhtiar submitted 97 pages of preliminary argument in support of his petition today and argued heatedly with Chief Justice Anwarul Haq for at least a 30-day stay, which he maintained was needed to prepare defence arguments.

Bhutto and four members of his government's political police force were sentenced to death in March by the Lahore High Court, which convicted them of conspiring to murder Kasuri, a former close associate of Bhutto who broke with him.

Chad Premier's Forces Winning

PARIS (AP) — Premier Hissene Habre's forces are reported gaining ground in Africa's newest war, to oust President Felix Malloum of Chad. France is seeking a ceasefire in its former colony.

Before communications were lost Tuesday with the capital of N'Djamena, the city of 400,000 was said to be divided into opposing camps and numerous casualties were reported.

Gen. Louis Forrest, commander of French troops in the former colony in north central Africa, was said to be trying to arrange the truce as the fighting moved into its third day.

Chad gained independence from France in 1960. The French government said Tuesday its forces in Chad were not involved in the latest fighting, which it called an internal matter.

Agence France-Presse (AFP) said Habre's supporters have moved into residential quarters in the northern part of the embattled city and taken over the villas of some French residents, warning other French to remain in their homes. The French news agency reported Habre's men took over a telecommunications facility in the capital and shut it down.

The fighting was touched off Monday by a clash among rival student groups, culminating a long-standing feud between the two leaders over national policy.

Authorities said the student clash followed arguments over whether to obey a strike call by Habre followers. Government soldiers fired in the air to disperse an angry crowd of students and Habre's men fired on the regulars, AFP said.

Soon after, government forces attacked Habre's residence with rocket and mortar fire, but he was reported to have escaped and fled the capital. Reports said his troops then took over the hospital and the capital's radio station.

Radiation Coverup Linked to Sheep

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Nearly 4,300 sheep grazing downwind from Nevada nuclear tests died in the spring of 1953 after absorbing up to 1,000 times the maximum amount of radioactive iodine allowed for humans, government documents show.

"If that happened to sheep out here, what about the people that lived in Cedar City, who got a higher dose?" said Michael Zimmerman, a member of Gov. Scott Matheson's radiation committee, which released the papers Tuesday. Cedar City, Utah, is about 160 kilometres east of the test site in Nevada.

The 400 documents — most from the federal government — were released the same day the Deseret News revealed a study concluding that more southern Utah children born during the 1950s nuclear tests have died from leukemia than those born before and after the tests.

Zimmerman told reporters that some of the documents show radiation contributed to the sheep deaths. Despite evidence of high levels of radiation exposure however, he said, the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) concluded in late 1953 that radiation had not actually caused the sheep deaths.

Zimmerman said the documents indicate "a wilful refusal" by the AEC to investigate the deaths and to determine if high radiation levels may also have affected human health.

Between March 17 and June 4, 1953, the AEC conducted 11 atmospheric nuclear tests at the Nevada Test Site, the documents indicate. Such tests ended in 1962.

The documents, discovered in the state archives late last year, show that Utah ranchers in November 1952 placed about 18,000 sheep on winter grazing land in Lincoln County, Nev.

When the sheep were returned to Utah in the spring of 1953, ranchers noted many were sick and dying. Ewes had spontaneous abortions and showed burn-like lesions on the face, neck and ears. Most lambs were born dead and stunted, and ewes died either during lambing or within a few days, the documents show.

A U.S. Public Health Service report said that June 9 autopsies on two ewes showed the concentration of Iodine 131 in their thyroid glands "exceeds by a factor of 250 to 1,000 the maximum permissible concentration of radioactive iodine for humans."

In a copyright story Tuesday, the Deseret News reported on a year-long study by Dr. Joseph Lyon, co director of the Utah Cancer Registry. Lyon was quoted by The News as saying from 15 to 20 children died of leukemia who would not have died without the tests.

Lyon, who declined comment on the report Tuesday, reported on the study to government scientists in Washington on Dec. 12.

Over 230 claims have been filed by cancer victims and their families in Utah, Arizona and Nevada with the U.S. department of energy — the successor of the AEC — alleging the tests caused cancer and deaths.

FLAT BLESSING IN DISGUISE

JERUSALEM (Reuter) — A punctured tire prevented a possible bomb explosion in a crowded bus in southern Israel on Tuesday, police said today.

They said an Israeli Arab on the bus travelling to Tel Aviv from Beersheba flung away a package when passengers were ordered out after the bus stopped with a flat tire.

The package exploded some distance away, causing no damage. The Arab was arrested.

Police believe he planned to get off the bus at the next station, leaving the bomb behind.

Catholic Priest Described As Gambling Philanderer

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — A Roman Catholic priest, described by a woman parishoner as a "thief, a gambler and a philanderer," has been ordered to post $1,000 bail while awaiting a hearing on possible perjury charges. Rev. Stanley Miaskewicz, 58, had sued widow Arlene LeTourneau for defamation of character after she alleged that he seduced her. But Miaskewicz lost his case against the 58-year-old widow Monday when a superior court jury rejected his claims that he had not violated his vow of celibacy. Judge Thomas Morse Jr. also ordered Miaskewicz to appear in court next Tuesday to present evidence showing why he should not face charges for committing perjury on five separate occasions during the nine-day trial.

NEW YORK — Nelson Rockefeller frequently went to Megan Marshack's apartment to work with her on his art collection and writing about it, The Daily News reports. The former U.S. vice-president went to the 25-year-old woman's apartment at 25 W. 54th St. in Manhattan, even though he had access to office space nearby, including the 13 W. 54 St. townhouse where he died, the newspaper said in today's editions. Miss Marshack was with Rockefeller when he was stricken with a fatal heart attack the night of Jan. 26. Residents of the Regency House, Miss Marshack's co-operative building, confirmed that Rockefeller went inside often. "He always carried a briefcase and he would always send (her) flowers before he arrived," one woman told The News.

LOS ANGELES — Three years and one day after actor Sal Mineo was stabbed in the heart with a fishing knife in the garage area of his apartment, Lionel Williams, 22, a former pizza deliveryman, was convicted of his murder. The jury reached a verdict Tuesday after deliberating almost a week. Williams showed no emotion as the verdict was read — guilty of second-degree murder and 10 counts of robbery. He turned his head casually to glance at the courtroom audience, then unwrapped a stick of gum and began chewing.

LONDON — Reginald Maudling, Conservative party member of Parliament and a former cabinet minister, died today in hospital. He was 61. Maudling was taken to hospital three weeks ago suffering from internal bleeding and doctors diagnosed acute hepatitis. His condition worsened Tuesday when he hemorrhaged and the hospital said there was "some indication of kidney failure." Maudling was chancellor of the exchequer from 1962 to 1964 and home secretary from 1970-72. He resigned the latter post when police investigated the affairs of his business associate, architect John Poulson, later jailed on fraud charges.

CALGARY — A man sentenced to jail for impaired driving was seen wandering about in a Calgary courthouse in search of a jailer. Presiding Judge A. P. Demong said Joseph Chartrand left the courtroom escorted by an armed city policeman who was there as a witness in another case. Chartrand was later seen two floors above the courtroom in a public area without his escort. After asking a reporter where he could find a jailer, he was referred to another policeman in the area. Chartrand, sentenced to 21 days, told the officer he wanted to go to jail. The startled officer searched several courtrooms in vain for a jailer before returning with Chartrand to the second floor, where a courthouse guard was found.

THE BRITISH LIKE GERMANS, BUT. . .

HAMBURG (Reuter) — The British like the Germans much more than the Germans like the British, a recent survey shows.

The West German magazine Stern says that in its two-country poll, conducted 40 years after the outbreak of the Second World War, 54 per cent of the Britons surveyed said they liked Germans but only 36 per cent of the Germans said they liked the British.

Fifty-two per cent of the Britons said their opinion of the Germans has improved in the last few years. Only 13 per cent of the Germans said the same of the British.

But the British apparently have a marginally rosier view of themselves — 52 per cent thought the British are liked abroad, while 48 per cent of the Germans assumed the same of themselves.

The Rites Were Wrong

DUBLIN (AP) — The military attache at the British embassy in Dublin attended the funeral of a IRA veteran by mistake Tuesday, according to officials here.

Gen. William Robertson set out by car for Bandon, near Cork, for the funeral of a British Second World War veteran, near Cork, but his chauffeur took him by mistake to a church where requiem mass was being said for the guerrilla veteran.

Gen. Robertson only realized the mistake after the sermon, an official said.

CARTER'S PEANUT BUSINESS FOR SALE

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Carter peanut warehouse operation in Plains, Ga., is up for sale, according to President Carter's trustee, Charles Kirbo, who is overseeing the business.

The operation has had financial difficulties in recent years, some of them attributable to a costly expansion program. Moreover, the finances of the warehouse have been under scrutiny by the Justice Department because of suggestions — so far unsupported — that funds may have been diverted to Carter's presidential campaign.

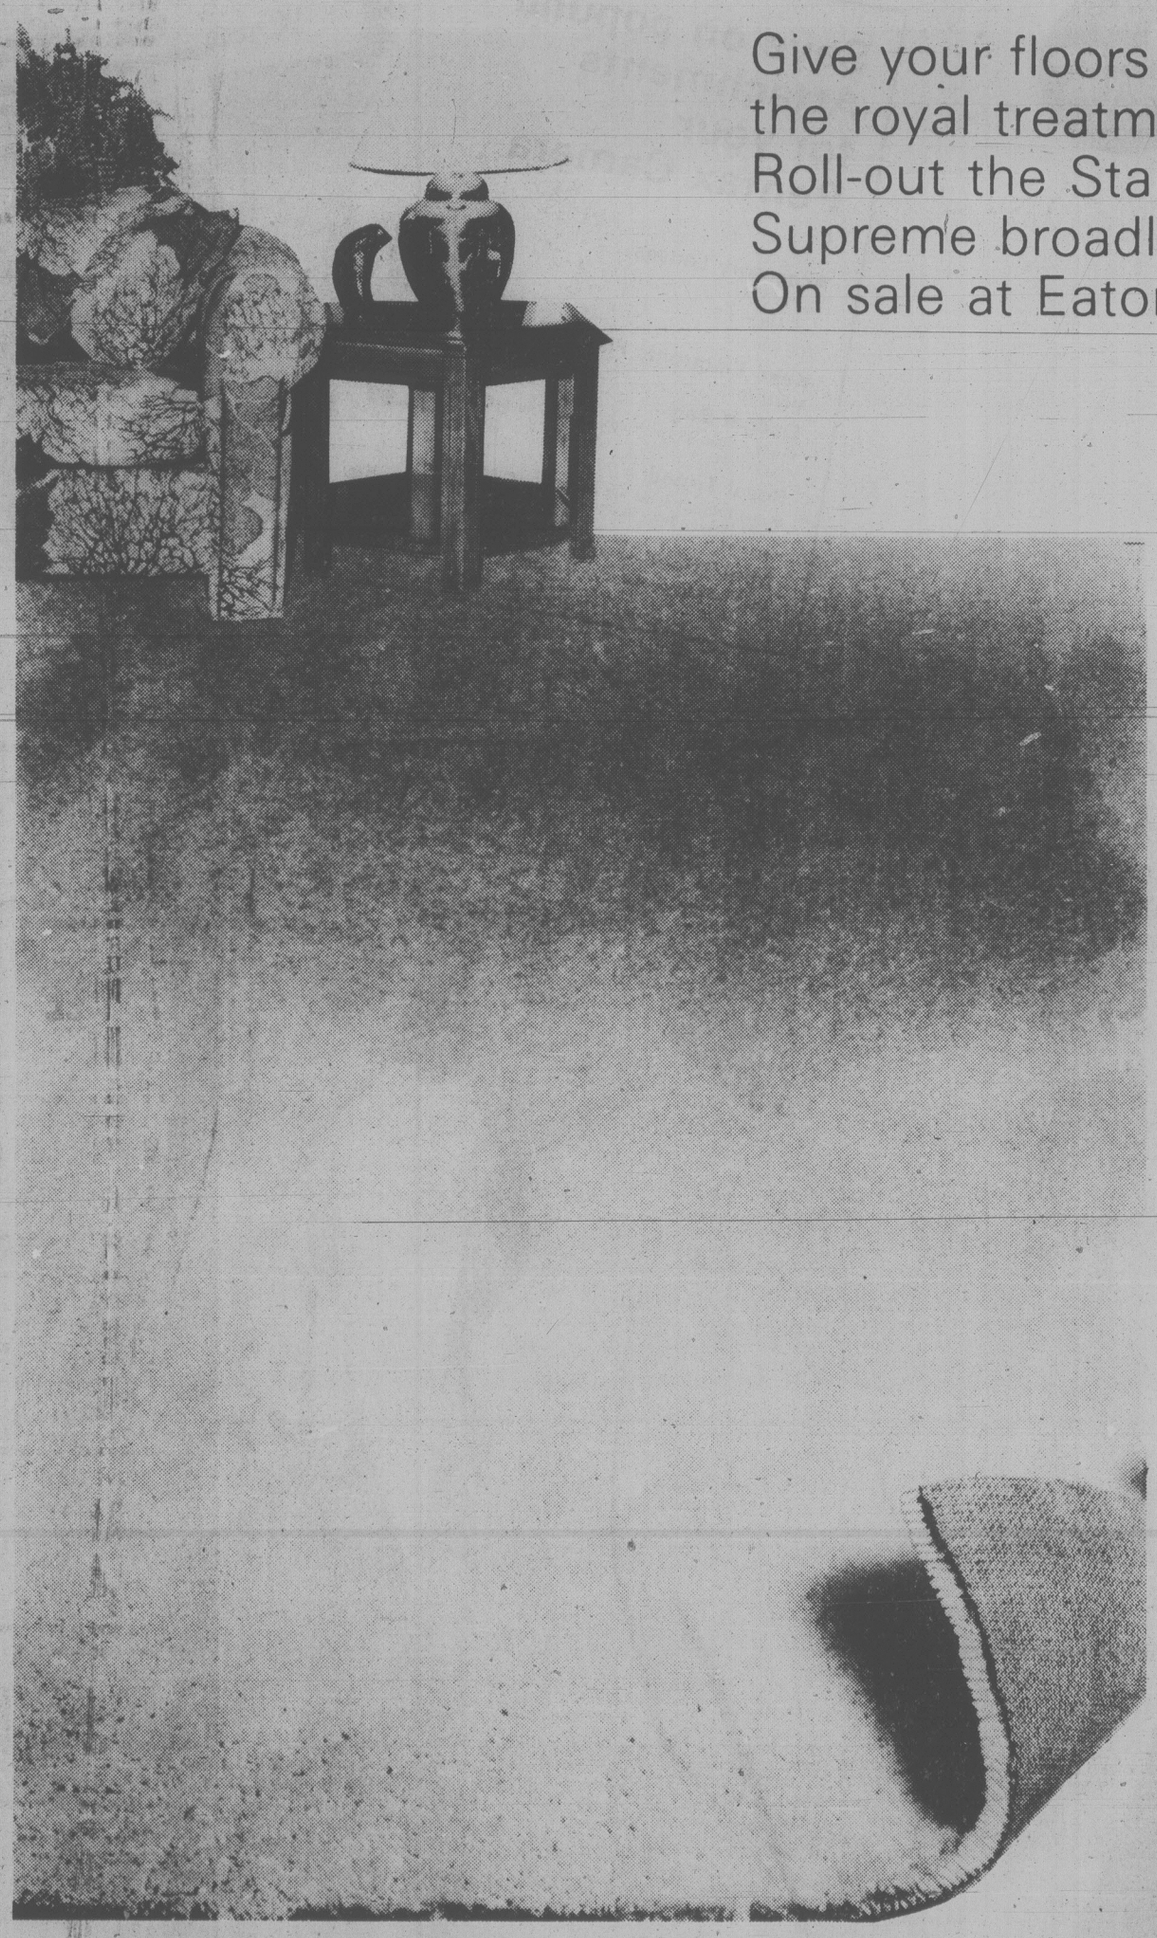

The president's brother, Billy Carter, offered to buy the business in mid-1977, but Kirbo found his terms were unacceptable and turned him down.

During an interview at his Atlanta office, Kirbo made it clear that the recent adverse publicity about the investigation contributed to his decision. But he added: "When I first took it over, I was considering selling it."

The records have been subpoenaed an off-shoot of the grand jury probe into the finances of former Budget Director Bert Lance. Lance, while head of the National Bank of Georgia, arranged loans of some $6.5 million to the Carter operation in 1975 and 1976.

"I have not yet had a satisfactory offer from a satisfactory buyer," Kirbo said.

"I could have sold it some time ago to foreigners," Kirbo continued. "But there's been enough bad publicity about it already without selling to them."

Saudi Arabia Nationalizes Aramco Oil Consortium

CAIRO (WP) — Saudi Arabia announced Tuesday that it has taken over Aramco, the oil consortium that built the Saudi petroleum industry from scratch.

The announcement of the full nationalization of The Arabian American Oil Co., follows more than five years of difficult negotiations and virtually ends the era in which western oil companies claimed any ownership rights to the Persian Gulf oil bonanza. Iran, Iraq, and Kuwait had previously nationalized their oil industries, buying out or booting out the oil companies that developed them.

Aramco is the world's largest oil-exporting company, since it ships all but a tiny fraction of Saudi Arabia's oil. Its long-anticipated takeover by the government, however, is expected to have little immediate impact on world supplies or prices because the Saudis have had a majority interest since 1973 and were already making the major policy decisions.

The full nationalization of Aramco was announced by Abdul Hadi Taher, governor of Petromin, the state-owned oil and mineral authority.

According to the official Saudi press agency, Aramco will be replaced by a new organization called the Saudi National Petroleum Co.

Taher said the Aramco companies — Exxon, Mobile, Texaco and Standard Oil of California — would "continue their various services in exploration, refining and production," the Saudi press agency reported, but control and ownership will rest entirely with the new company.

Aramco officials, past and present, have frequently said that they do not expect much change in the way the Saudi oil industry is operated after the takeover, which is essentially a legal and political matter. According to company figures, only about 8 per cent of Aramco's work force of more than 20,000 are Americans and many of those will probably remain, since the Saudis are not in a position to dispense with U.S. technology, equipment or management assistance and have said they do not wish to do so.

But the removal of the word "American" from the Saudi oil industry's name, symbolizing the removal of the last American concessionary rights, eliminates a political irritant at a time when all the Persian Gulf states are eager to minimize the opportunities for political or religious radicals to attack them. The four American companies will continue to produce and market Saudi oil, according to Aramco officials, but they will do so as contractors and no longer as owners.

Aramco, which has shipped more than 30 billion barrels of oil out of Saudi Arabia since operations began in 1938, does much more than operate the Saudi oil industry. It is also the major contractor in one of the world's most ambitious development programs.

Aramco has been in charge of the $14 billion project to collect and process the gas that is flared off in the oil fields and was building a pipeline across the country and a massive electric power network for Saudi Arabia's eastern province. Those projects are apparently going to be continued by SNPC, which will keep the Americans on as subcontractors.

Rights Record Rapped

WASHINGTON (WP) — A quarter-century has passed since the U.S. Supreme Court ordered U.S. schools to desegregate, but nearly half the country's minority children still attend segregated institutions, the U.S. Civil Rights Commission said Tuesday.

Observing the 25th anniversary of the 1954 Brown vs. Topeka decision, the commission's latest status report criticized Congress for passing legislation to weaken enforcement efforts and the executive branch for failing to put its full weight behind desegregation.

"We should be further down the road than we are at this time," said commission chairman Arthur S. Flemming. It would, he said, be "indefensible" for integration to proceed no faster in the future than it has to date.

The commission called upon Congress, the White House and the departments of justice and health, education and welfare (HEW) to beef up their enforcement efforts, the resources they devote to desegregation and the attention they give to the problem.

Citizens, said Flemming, should organize to get rid of the Eagleton-Biden amendment, 1977 legislation sponsored by Democratic senators Thomas Eagleton and Joseph R. Biden Jr. that forbids HEW from cutting off funds to districts that refuse to comply with busing requirements.

The commission, which has no power to enforce the law but is charged with monitoring its progress, made its observations from HEW's 1976 study of 3,616 out of the nation's 16,000 school districts. In some, "equality of education is taking on real meaning" and progress has been achieved, the report said. Tacoma, Wash., was among the districts singled out for praise.

Other school districts "have employed a variety of devices to prevent, obstruct or slow down desegregation," including Buffalo, N.Y.; Cleveland; Indianapolis, Ind.; Los Angeles; and New Castle County, Delaware. The commission cited East Baton Rouge Parish, La., and Pittsburgh, Pa., as its worst cases, saying "obstructionist tactics: there have managed to block any meaningful desegregation.

"Congress has aided and abetted the obstructionists . . . by attempting to make it increasingly difficult to enforce desegregation policies," the report said.

In 1976, 46 per cent of all minority students, or 4.9 million of them, attended "moderately or highly" segregated schools, according to commission figures.

Segregation rates are "considerably higher in the northeast (65 per cent) and north-central regions (68 per cent) than elsewhere, but even in the region with the lowest average level, the southeast (with 34 per cent), the level of segregation is noticeable."

The commission noted "an extremely high rate of findings of noncomplicance" with mandates for bilingual education, observing that such programs are still "the critical component" for educational equity for Hispanics, Asian and Pacific Island Americans, American Indians and Alaskan natives.

Flemming said the commission agreed that integration of suburban communities with inner-city school districts will be "absolutely essential . . . to achieve the goals."

Church Urges Action To Counter Social Evils

PUEBLA, Mexico (AP) — The bishops and cardinals of Latin America on Tuesday urged all Roman Catholics to take social action to counter corruption, poverty, oppression and political violence in the area.

The appeal, made in a 200-page document after of two weeks of deliberation, did not recommend a concrete action plan.

One hundred eighty-seven bishops and cardinals had debated the issues.

The church rejects capitalism as too materialistic and Marxism as failing to include spirituality, the document said.

"The goods and riches of this world . . . are intended to be useful and beneficial to all, to each and every man and nation," it saic.

The bishops criticized communism for seeing man "as a cog in the machinery of industrial production" and that capitalism "lends itself to a materialistic praxis and presents us a very individualistic notion of man . . . blind to the demands of social justice and places itself at the service of the international imperialists of money."

The bishops condemned political violence by oppressive regimes and guerrilla groups in countries where military-backed governments have sent activist priests into hiding or exile.

They condemned exploitation of women in Latin America, saying that in some cases women had been transformed into "a consumer object for a hedonistic society which masks the exploitation of women under the cover of human progress (eroticism, pornography etc)."

The document denounced attitudes toward national security in the area, and without naming countries, condemned governments that place security "above the basic needs of the abandoned masses."

The debate was mostly between conservative hierarchs fearful of repressive reaction from Latin American authoritarian governments, and liberals demanding a step forward on recommendations made by the previous conference in Medellin, Colombia, 10 years ago.

The Medellin conference reversed traditional conservative church policy, which tended to side with the wealthy classes and entrenched governments, by urging priests to help the poor and oppressed, through social work.

Bias Charged Over Films

TEL AVIV (AP) — A member of Israel's parliament says another lawmaker is letting his love for cowboy movies influence his political judgment. Geula Cohen said that Pessa Grupper has agreed to back a request by the National Broadcasting Authority to raise the annual television tax to $50 from $30 in return for the screening of two movies a week and two westerns a month. Grupper denies Mrs. Cohen's allegation.

Anti-Amin Fight Heats

NAIROBI, Kenya (Reuter) — An unnamed Ugandan underground group said today its supporters have destroyed the main Uganda-Kenya railway line at Busembatia, eastern Uganda.

A spokesman for the group told Reuters news agency by telephone: "We believe there is now no railway communication between Kampala and the eastern areas of Uganda, through which the main line to Kenya passes.

"This is part of the action for national revolt that will be continuing, and will be intensified."

The spokesman said his group was not part of the Save Uganda Movement (SUM) which claimed responsibility for sabotage in Kampala last week.

"But we are in collaboration with SUM. It is part of the same struggle."

He added: "The struggle is on, and it will be countrywide."

Former Ugandan president Milton Obote, who has been living in Tanzania since he was overthrown by President Idi Amin in 1971, recently called on exile and underground groups to unite and intensify their operations to bring down Amin.

50,000 Road Deaths

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. highway traffic deaths topped 50,000 in 1978 for the first time since the 55 mph speed limit was imposed, federal safety officials said today.

An estimated 50,145 persons died in traffic deaths in 1978, up 4.7 per cent from 1977 when 47,876 were killed, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said.

Highway deaths hit 54,052 in 1973, the year of the Arab oil embargo. The toll dropped by about 9,000 to 45,196 the following year when the national 55 mph speed limit was enacted to conserve fuel. Highway deaths, however, have been increasing steadily since.

"Greater compliance with 55 mph speed limit law is needed," said National Highway Traffic Safety Administrator Joan Claybrook.

"The Transportation Department remains firmly committed (to the 55 mph limit) because it not only saves lives but also makes a vital contribution to President Carter's energy conservation program."

Legislators in 10 states in the West have said they want to challenge the federal 55 mph speed limit program. Under that plan, the Transportation Department can withhold highway aid for states failing to establish the speed limit and enforce it.

The Wyoming House Tuesday killed a bill passed by the state senate that would have decreased fines for motorists travelling between 55 mph and 65 mph.

Ms. Claybrook also called on motorists to wear safety belts, calling them "the most effective safety device available in today's motor vehicle."

Motorcycle and truck occupant fatalities increased 6 per cent in 1977, the safety officials reported.

Police Probe Fulton Crash

A police investigation is under way into a traffic incident involving B.C. Supreme Court Judge E. Davie Fulton, Attorney-General Garde Gardom said today.

The 63-year-old former federal justice minister and one-time leader of the B.C. Conservative party was given a 24-hour driving suspension by Vancouver police following a minor rear-end collision Saturday night.

Under the law, police can suspend a licence if there is evidence the driver has been drinking.

Gardom said Mr. Justice Fulton had holidays planned and is now taking two or three weeks off.

The attorney-general said the investigation is expected to take about a week.

Gardom said he had no details on the case other than what he has heard on news reports.

Vancouver radio station CKNW said the criminal law division of Gardom's ministry has asked for a tape transcript made as city police officers gave Fulton his suspension.

But Gardom said he could not confirm that.

The tape was made by CKNW reporter George Garrett when police stopped a car at 70th and Granville after a minor motor vehicle accident.

It quotes Fulton questioning the police action and other statements made to the police.

Fulton, justice minister in the government of former prime minister John Diefenbaker, was alone in his vehicle when it was involved in the collision.

Police said Fulton was "very upset" after the accident and officers decided to take him home.

LOUGHEED CALLS MARCH ELECTION

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed today ended weeks of speculation by calling a provincial election for Wednesday, March 14.

Lougheed said the first issue of the campaign will be the record of his government in social, economic and resource management policies of the last four years.

He listed as a second issue the management of the heritage savings trust fund that has grown to about $4 billion.

Party standing at dissolution was Progressive Conservatives 69, Social Credit 4, New Democratic Party 1, Independent 1.

The election comes after 7½ years of Progressive Conservative rule. It is the second winter vote in Alberta in 39 years.

Gov't Eyes Food Cost Steps

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Warren Allmand told the Commons Tuesday that the federal government is considering further action to try to curb rising food prices.

Tory agriculture critic John Wise said in an interview later he believes the government may be headed towards putting controls on food prices in a last-gasp effort to slow increases in grocery bills before a spring general election.

Wise noted Allmand did not deny suggestions the government would move to restrain food price increases even though he ruled out a re-introduction of wage and price controls.

Earlier Wise tried in the Commons to get Allmand to say what policies have been implemented under the government's national food strategy. Allmand said there is "slow but steady progress."

He repeated earlier promises of government action when its ready to slow food price increases now running at 12 to 14 per cent annually. Allmand said they'll drop to nine to 10 per cent later in the year.

But he refused to list what action had been taken under the food strategy. Wise had no more luck when he tried Monday to get Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan to say what has been done. Whelan said he could produce a five-page list of accomplishments but wouldn't name any.

"If they've achieved something, they should give be able to give us one or two examples," Wise said.

He said controls on food prices would be further government tinkering with the free-market system and additional proof of the absence of a food strategy.

When announced in June, 1977, the strategy's goals were to provide safe, nutritious food at reasonable prices for consumers and producers.

But food prices have risen faster than the Consumer Price Index in the last few years but until mid-1978, farm incomes were falling instead of rising.

IT'S ALL IN THE BOUQUET

NORTH PIDDLE, Worcestershire (CP) — Businessman Peter Dodgson is proud of his village and his wine and has won his fight to honor both — well, almost.

Originally, he was refused permission to register his wine as Chateau Piddle. But he argued that French wines are named for the areas where they are produced.

So the officials relented half way. He may market the elixir under the name of his choice, but he won't be allowed an official entry in the register of trade names because they say the name is not an accurate description of the contents of the bottle.

Zoning Red Tape To Go

Vander Zalm For Speed-Up

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Legislation will be introduced by the provincial government this year to speed up the process of getting rezoning and development approval from municipalities, Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Tuesday night.

At this time an application that might take six or eight weeks to receive the official go-ahead in Washington or Oregon could involve a wait of up to three years in some B.C. municipalities, he claimed.

Two key features of the legislation would be:

— Establishment of time limits for advisory boards and other local government agencies to deal with applications and return them to the referring council.

— Opportunity for the public to have its say at a far earlier stage in the approval process.

Vander Zalm also disclosed, following a 50-minute address to the annual meeting of the Broadmead Ratepayers' Association, that his ministry is looking at the possibility of introducing what he called a "Planning Act."

This would standardize across the province a whole range of regulations and requirements governing such things as sewers, storm drains, curbs and other services.

At present, he said, there is a bewildering number of such regulations, with nearly every municipality differing from its neighbor.

Because some municipal engineers come from Europe, they favor European designs and products and this, in turn, leads to material supply problems.

"I think we should be developing uniform standards for B.C., using B.C. products," the minister told reporters after the meeting.

Vander Zalm said his own exercise in deregulation is needed to cut down the intolerable delays now experienced in obtaining zoning and development approval from B.C. municipalities.

As a result, industries that might have located here have given up in frustration and gone south of the border.

Another shortcoming of the present system is that by the time affected residents can express their opinion at the public hearing stage, development proposals have achieved such a momentum that councils tend to be committed and citizens feel they cannot influence the decision.

Vander Zalm said he would like to see a procedure that would allow residents to voice their feelings at the beginning before developers have plunged into

Pierre Trudeau . . . Comic Book Hero

Times News Services

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau has achieved recognition over the years as a world leader, but he has lately won recognition in a completely different field — as a comic book hero.

In the last month, the prime minister's face has become familiar to more than a quarter-million young readers of Marvel Comics in North America, England, India, Japan, Australia and Singapore as a Canadian leader furious over the loss of his secret weapon, a mutant named "Wolverine".

Wolverine, according to his creator, Chris Claremont of the New York-based comic book empire, was less than grateful to the Canadian Defence Department for turning him into a super-powered mutant, and accepted an offer from the American superheroes, X-men, to join them and use his powers for all mankind.

Trudeau — identified only as "Mr. Prime Minister, but clearly recognizable by his face — wants him back, and orders Alpha Flight, Canada's own team of super-heroes, to reclaim him.

The climax is a titanic battle between Alpha Flight and the X-men that devastates Calgary.

The opening scene of the yarn, entitled Chaos In Canada, is the war room of the Canadian defence department where the sinister-looking prime minister is demanding the return of Wolverine.

The Alpha Flight mutants, working for the Canadian government, battle Wolverine and the X-men in Calgary right into the May issue of Uncanny X-Men. But in the end, Wolverine escapes back to the United States.

Head of the Alpha Flight, Major Maple Leafs, is really Dr. Hudson, an unmad sci-

More Winds On Way

SEATTLE (AP) — Power outages and flooding plagued parts of Washington today after the state's worst windstorm in 17 years, and flood waters threatened portions of Idaho and Utah.

The National Weather Service predicted more strong winds, from 60 to 90 kilometres an hour were in store for the Northwest today.

On Tuesday, a violent storm roared inland from the Pacific and tore apart the $24.6-million Hood Canal Bridge northwest of Seattle (see picture on page 15), caused at least two deaths and left tens of thousands of homes and businesses without electricity.

Moslem Gunmen Slay U.S. Ambassador

NEW DELHI (AP) — Moslem gunmen shot and killed the U.S. ambassador to Afghanistan, Adolph Dubs, when security forces stormed a hotel in the Afghan capital of Kabul where Dubs was being held hostage today, the official Kabul radio reported.

The broadcast said all four kidnappers were killed. Officials at the U.S. embassy here said the gunmen had demanded freedom for three Shiite Moslem clergymen jailed by the leftist Afghan government.

Those officials said they do not know whether the 58-year-old ambassador was killed by his kidnappers or by police bullets.

In Washington, U.S. officials sharply criticized the Kabul government's decision to storm the building.

Kabul radio, in an announcement relayed to Washington, said Afghan police "tried their best to free the ambassador from the terrorists and the terrorists refused to free him."

The kidnappers took him to the Kabul Hotel in the heart of the city, took over a guest room and communicated their demands to authorities.

Three hours later, the kidnappers threatened to kill the ambassador in 10 minutes if their demands were not met.

The broadcast said the kidnappers then shot the ambassador.

CP Profits Up 40%

MONTREAL (CP) - Canadian Pacific Ltd., Canada's largest corporation, has reported record profits in 1978 of $341 million, or $4.72 a share, compared with $247 million, or $3.41 a share in 1977.

The company attributed the gain to strong performance of both its transportation and CP Investments divisions in 1978.

The iron and steel, oil and gas, and forest products operations of CPI posted the greatest increases, while the subsidiary's hotels operations declined.

CP Ltd. predicted 1979 profits would equal 1978's record performance. The company said it also plans record capital investment of more than $1 billion for 1979.

See-Saw Battle for Embassy

Times News Services

TEHRAN — Scores of guerrillas firing automatic weapons stormed the U. S. embassy today, wounded two people and took the ambassador and 101 other Americans hostage before rival guerrillas rescued the Americans in a 3½-hour gun battle.

Major fighting also erupted today in the northwestern city of Tabriz and several hundred persons were killed.

Reports said fighting was going on in 21 areas in Tabriz and that there had been a major battle for control of the local radio station. The reports said military aircraft had been sent to the city, presumably to take part in fighting.

Guerrillas loyal to the new Iranian government said those who attacked the embassy in Tehran were Communists. One of the attackers also said Communists participated in the assault.

Premier Mehdi Bazargan left the first meeting of his new cabinet when informed of the attack, and a spokesman for the ayatollah Khomeini said: "This is against the direct orders of the ayatollah, who has repeatedly stated that embassies should not be molested. Those attacking do not represent the revolution."

Bazargan, meanwhile, announced the appointment of seven cabinet members from among the Western-educated political veterans of the National Front, the liberal-leftist coalition which Mohammed Mossadegh founded more than 25 years ago to oppose the shah.

In Washington, the state department said it was considering a mass evacuation of 7,000 U.S. citizens from Iran following the attack on the embassy.

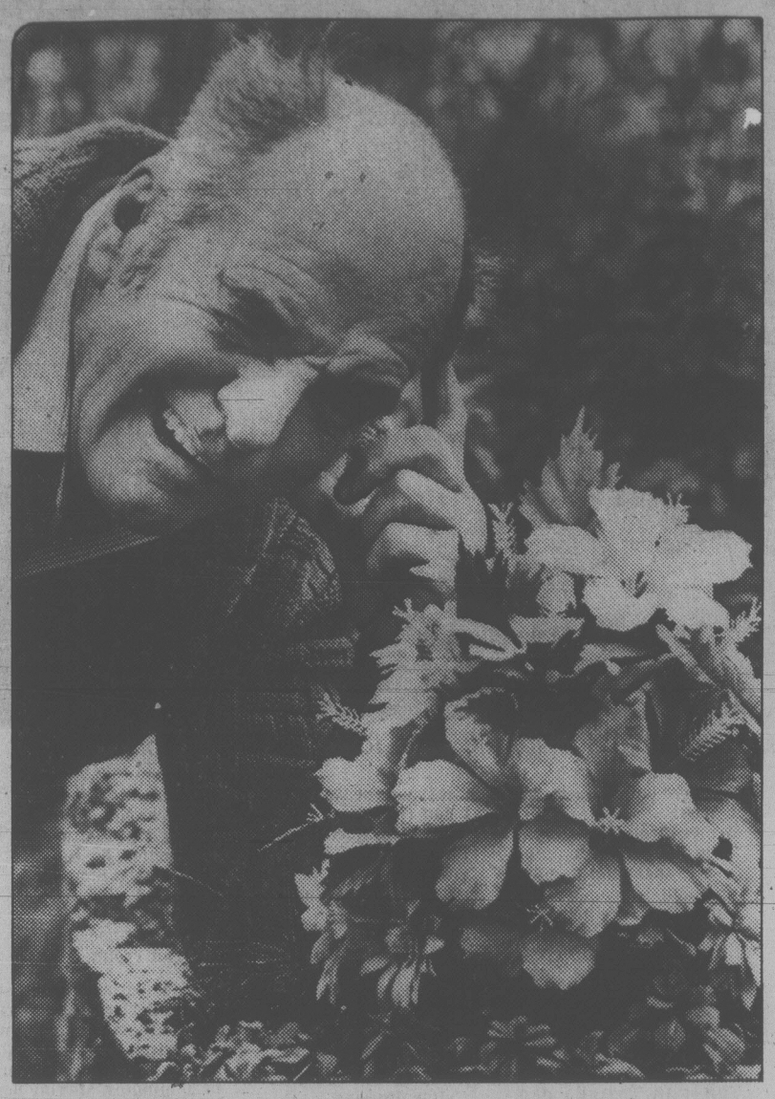

Department officials said a small contingent of U.S. Marines and evacuation helicopters have been "prepositioned" overseas for several days due to the situation in Iran. They were reported to be available in Italy and the Azores.

In a related development, the Soviet Union has offered the use of its territory for the evacuation of foreigners trying to leave Iran but all frontier crossings have been closed from the Iranian side, Western diplomats said Tuesday.

Flower Count Sprouting

Victoria's annual flower count started at 9 a.m. today when a woman phoned to report 720 snowdrops and 197 crocuses growing in her backyard.

This was followed by a man reporting a single yellow pansy.

Phone number for the count is 381-5315.

Teams organized by Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce will count flowers at Beacon Hill Park, Butchart Gardens, Vantreight's farm, University of Victoria and Government House before the counting ends on Feb. 20.

See also page 32.

Victorians had counted 35,694 flowers growing outdoors during the first two hours of the annual tabulation today. Snowdrops and crocuses were the most popular varieties followed by heather, azaleas and wallflowers.

"If we took a count at Beacon Hill Park today it might only take seven minutes," campaign chairman Carmela Costigan said.

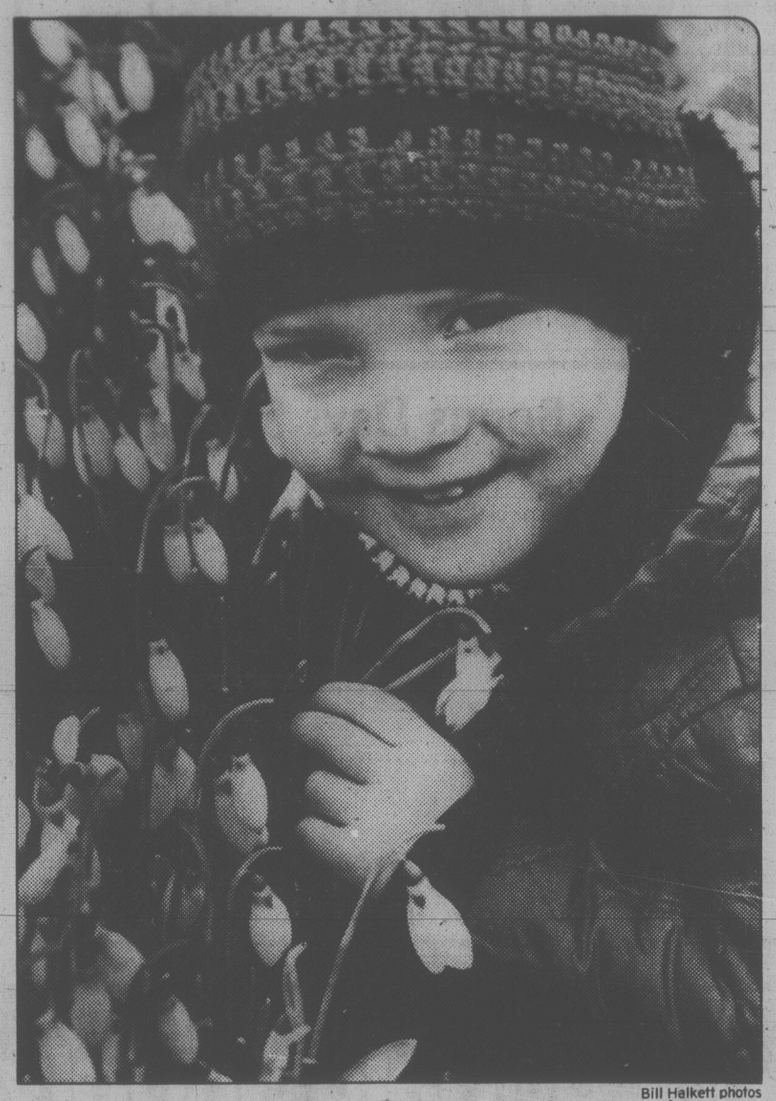

"The flowers are a little scarce at the moment but there should be a lot more in a few days."

The target for the count is one million flowers.

Mrs. Costigan was interviewed today by CBC's national Good Morning show and she said it is clear there are legions of skeptics in Eastern Canada.

"They just can't believe we have flowers blooming at this time of year. They think this is some sort of tongue-in-cheek promotion and I have to stress that we are serious about this.

"We want all of Canada to know they can smell the flowers and play golf all year around in Victoria."

Democracy's Bills Called Grotesque

Democracy doesn't come cheap, even at the municipal government level, Saanich aldermen were told Tuesday.

Mayor Mel Couvelier said he wants his council colleagues to appreciate the fact the cost of reaching the electorate is becoming grotesque.

One example cited by the mayor was the cost of notifying residents of tonight's public hearing on a proposal to double the minimum lot size for subdivision of rural property.

Couvelier told the policy and management committee the total costs involved in the notification exercise, including postage, labor and newspaper advertising, came to $4,500.

As 1,500 residents are potentially affected by the rezoning, that works out to $3 per person, he noted.

Couvelier stressed he is not arguing against the policy of informing the electorate as fully as possible, but merely trying to ensure that elected officials and citizens appreciate the cost of democracy.

He made his comments during debate on a proposed overhaul of council's procedural bylaw, particularly as it applies to public hearings on rezoning applications.

One suggestion from Ald. John Mika was to broaden the policy of routinely notifying all residents living within 300 feet of property proposed for rezoning. Mika said he would like to see the radius doubled to 600 feet.

But municipal clerk Bob Sharp was clearly unenthusiastic about the idea, claiming that in doubling the radius council would also be doubling the clerical costs.

Sharp said he wondered whether the wider notification was really needed.

"Are you just inviting irrelevant comments?"

He said the municipal administration process is already complicated by numerous procedures and deadlines.

Mika said a case could be argued for different radii in different parts of the municipality. A 300-foot policy in a fairly densely populated urban area produces a vastly different result from applying that arbitrary rule in a more sparsely settled rural or semi-rural environment.

In any case, Mika said, a policy of full and open communication with residents would be an investment for Saanich, irrespective of costs and other considerations.

"I believe we can get value out of community involvement. Council business is speeded up if there is trust between council and the community," he added.

TRUSTEES DRAW OAK BAY FIRE

Budget 'Grossly Irresponsible'

Ald. Peter Bunn of Oak Bay today labelled "grossly irresponsible" a $45 million operating budget approved Tuesday by the Greater Victoria School Board.

Bunn, a 16-year school board veteran and a former chairman, said he had been authorized by Mayor Brian Smith to denounce the budget. Oak Bay will request a meeting with trustees to discuss the impact on property taxes of budget increases, including the addition of 11 employees.

"The new members of the board are paying their election debt to the teachers union," Bunn charged.

He said he will recommend that council issue a formal complaint to Education Minister Pat McGeer and the finance ministry.

The operating budget is 6.8 per cent higher than last year's $42 million final budget.

Increases to the 1979 provisional budget drawn up in November by the former board total less than $500,000, but are only the tip of the iceberg, Bunn said.

"The total impact won't be felt on the tax notice going around in the next few months. The impact will be felt in a year's time," he predicted.

He said although staff additions will cost about $110,000 to implement, they will end up costing $250,000 by 1980.

During a four-hour session Tuesday night the board wrapped up a week of operating budget debate.

Trustees will meet today at 5:30 to complete the budget, which will be presented to McGeer just ahead of the Thursday deadline.

Board chairman Carol Pickup said today the district is eligible for a $300,000 education ministry incentives grant.

She said this is the third straight year the board has managed one of the lowest budget increases in the province.

The greatest increase in the provisional budget, an arbitrated award to teachers and an as yet unsettled contract with the Canadian Union of Pubic Employees, are beyond board control, she said.

The board trimmed $119,000 from district supplies.

General supplies were reduced by $50,000. Other cuts were made in the physical education, home economics, industrial education, science and library supplies budgets.

The number of teaching positions eliminated due to declining enrolment will drop from 58 to 47 this year, lowering the pupil-teacher ratio to 18.5 from 18.8.

Six of the new teaching positions will be at the elementary level, administration's top priority.

Two remedial specialists will be hired to work with junior high students and S.J. Willis will get a careers program teacher.

The board also created positions for a co-ordinator of counsellors and a psychometrics specialist.

Meanwhile, Saanich council's finance committee recommended Tuesday that council representatives meet with both Greater Victoria and Saanich school trustees to impress on them the need for budget restraint this year, following the ceiling of five per cent budget increases imposed on municipalities.

B.C. Tel to Spend $18.9 Million Here

B.C. Tel will spend $18.9 million in the Victoria area this year for cables and the continuing conversion to electronic switching equipment.

George Holmes, division customer service manager, said Victoria's Albion (477) exchange will be converted to an electronic system as will those whose phone numbers begin with 592 and 598.

A phone mart store will be opened in Victoria before year's end, allowing customers to come in and pick out the model and color of their choice.

In all, $42.2 million will be spent on Vancouver Island this year in the conversion program.

About $12.3 million will be used in the Nanaimo, Port Alberni and Duncan area and another $11 million at Campbell River, Courtenay and Port Hardy.

B.C. Tel will spend $2 million to improve its microwave radio system for Vancouver Island.

During the year, exchanges numbered 478, 658 and 652 will have automatic number identification equipment installed so customers will no longer have to give their number to an operator when dialing long distance calls.

The company will spend $8.3 million on conduits and cables in the Victoria region.

The total includes $2.7 million for 11 underground projects in the Victoria exchange, $274,000 for underground cable to the Keating office for housing developments at Saanichton and Brentwood Bay, $700,000 for three miles of underground cable for residential expansion in Sidney and $440,000 for expansion in Oak Bay.

Former Reeve Dies

George Murdoch, a former Oak Bay reeve and layman meteorologist, died Monday afternoon at his 2240 Beach Drive home. He was 85.

Born in Victoria and operator for many years of a music and appliance firm, he took an active part in community affairs. He was reeve from 1959 to 1963 after serving 13 years as a councillor.

He is survived by his widow Victoria Emily and two sons, George of Quadra Island and Alex of Prince Rupert. There are five grandchildren.

Island Price 'Outrageous'

Former Capital Regional District board chairman Jim Campbell said today provincial government money should not be used to buy Sidney Island, which owner Jack Todd has put on the market for $3.7 million.

The region's finance and personnel committee agreed with Campbell and will recommend the board not support the Sidney Island Committee's drive to buy the island with public funds.

"It's an outrageous price that's being asked," Campbell said. "It's a totally inflated notion of what it's worth. It (the island) has been appraised on the assumption that all of the island could be developed."

Campbell said the best part of the island for a boating park (Sidney Spit) is already a provincial park. He said much of the island is in the Agricultural Land Reserve and the acreage which can be used for residential purposes is zoned for 10-acre minimum lots.

Campbell said he would rather have people living on the island, protecting their properties, with the public having beach access than have the state buy it for vandals.

Let's Look Again at the Library Move

max low

It would seem that Victoria's Mike Young was talking exclusively about himself and his fellow mayors when talking about the on-again, off-again Greater Victoria Public Library move.

The move from cramped library quarters at Yates and Blanshard to two floors in the new provincial government building on Broughton has been a yo-yo sort of thing because of a promised provincial grant that wasn't promised. If you follow me.

After much thinking twice about it, aldermen of Victoria, Saanich, Esquimalt and Oak Bay decided to go along with the move. It involves the library paying the government an annual rent of $412,500 — but only with the proviso there is a built-in option to purchase. And that the government come through with a $400,000 grant the mayors insist Deregulation Minister Sam Bawlf promised for the move.

Sam now says the library people are more likely to get $150,000 and that he never promised them anything.

So it's a sort of stalemate with the mayors saying either the government comes up with the $400,000 or the library stays where it is. But Mike Young emerged from a meeting the municipal leaders had recently with Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis feeling positively positive. Library-moving hopes were still alive, he said.

Speaking fondly of the rental premises in the new building on Broughton, Young said:

"Everybody agrees that it would be the best possible prospect for Greater Victoria and nobody wants to see it slip by."

On the contrary, sir. If we're speaking about the people of Greater Victoria (and let's try doing that for once), everybody does not agree. And there are those, I know, who would love to see it race by.

They are the ones who object to their money being spent to move into and start up ($439,000 is going to be needed for that alone) a library in a building they feel will be too small almost immediately.

It probably will be, too, as the two floors in the Broughton street building cover 50,000 square feet, only 14,000 more than the 36,000-square-foot library on Yates where book-lovers bump into one another.

It's ridiculous when you think that the relatively small city of St. Catharines in Ontario recently opened a new 63,000-square-foot library or and when you consider that Winnipeg has one with 130,000 square feet.

Then there are those who feel it's daft to pay $4 million in rent to the government over the next 10 years and still have nothing to show for it.

Yet one article I read said "the library board's view has been all along that the rent-a-library idea is only a stop-gap measure and it intends to launch a search for a suitable site for a permanent library as soon as the current agreement is concluded."

How absurd!

That's why everyone doesn't agree, Mr. Young, and why there are those who say why not look for a permanent home for the library before building costs become even more inflated.

Those like Maggi Lynn, who suggested to the mayors the old Crystal Gardens would be an ideal place.

Well Maggi, a woman quite involved in community affairs, was laughed down on that one.

But she and other members of the James Bay Residents' League then suggested the government sell the almost-vacant St. Ann's Academy to the municipalities for $1 (much the same way the government acquired the Crystal from the city) and that it be renovated.

"Then, instead of being left cold by a rented sterile office-type building on Broughton, we could have one of the most beautiful community libraries in Canada," says Maggi. "There's plenty of room in St. Ann's — more than 55,000 square feet in the main building alone and about 10 acres of grounds — and they could expand there until hell freezes over.

"They'll tell you it's too expensive or it isn't feasible to renovate St. Ann's, just the way they'll say it isn't a good idea to buy the property behind the old library on Yates and expand that, and they'll push ahead with something new downtown," she adds. "But these things are feasible and I think they'd better start thinking about people instead of the developers and the downtown businessmen."
